GOOD TYPEWRITERS SCARCE

Supply Falls Far Short of the Demand in New York City.

FANCY SALARIES FOR HIGH CLASS WORK

Teaching the Business More Profitable Than Practicing It—A Girl Who Made Her Own Terms with Millionaires.

The supply of expert typewriters in New York City and stenographers falls far short of the demand. Yet expert stenographers and typewriters can easily command salaries of from $30 to $50 a week, so wonderfully has this field of work broadened since the pretty typewriter of ten or fifteen years ago stepped into business offices and routed men clerks in the same line.

The work has gradually taken the place of the teacher's position which used to be the goal of many a girl. Commercial schools are filled with pupils in stenography and typewriting, while in some offices apprentice girls pay as much as $250 for the privilege of learning the technicalities of the trade.

But, as in so many other fields of labor, the great complaint of inefficient work goes up from the downtown offices and the uptown shops. Great corporations, banks, large estates and business interests of many kinds are unable to get first-class workers in this field.

The trouble seems to be that the expert stenographer, as soon as she attains a position commanding a large salary, at once aspires to have her own office and employ girl clerks. Within the last ten years hundreds of these offices have sprung up throughout the city and each seems to prosper.

A meeting of financiers took place in a Fifth avenue hotel a few weeks ago and the services of an expert stenographer were required. The hotel stenographer was not deemed competent for the task and a telephone message was sent to the office of one of the largest of the typewriting manufacturing concerns.

The name of a young woman whose office is in the neighborhood of Fifth avenue was sent over the telephone to the waiting millionaire, but when the young woman was told that she would be required to leave her own office she answered that it would be impossible, as she had to attend to her own work.

A Fancy Fee.
A fee was offered her so large that it caused her to accept. She had carte blanche as to bringing her own machines and an assistant if necessary. A cab was sent for her, and in an hour she was installed in one of the state apartments taking rapid notes.

She was not the typically beautiful and blond-haired stenographer of fiction, but a very businesslike and plainly gowning girl, who was complete master of the work assigned to her. The bankers and railroad magnates were simply dumfounded with the ease and clearness with which she understood and almost anticipated her task which when submitted in manuscript proved to be a work of art in its perfection of form, clearness and neatness of execution.

For two days the young woman worked for a fee written in three figures each day, and then she declared with regret that she would have to send one of her clerks, as her own office work was in need of attention. The fee was doubled in order to retain her services.

When her week's work was concluded two offers of employment at $100 a week were made to her. But she refused and went back to her own business venture which she fancied gave her more independence.

The trouble with the beginners in stenography, and with many of the clerks who keep their places chiefly because of the smallness of their salaries, seems to lie in the fact that they lack general intelligence, although in many cases they are well versed in the technical part of the work.

Perfect typewriting requires almost a much precision, care and practice as pian playing. Carelessly written work shows at once in the imperfect shading of the ink, heavy in some spots and light in other. In the uneven, struggling appearance of the letters, the imperfect spacing and other defects which the eye of the expert detects at once.

Serious Mistakes.
Badly made erasures and corrections, crookedly placed sheets of paper, unclean type, at once record themselves in the eyes of the careless operator, but these blunders are not so serious as bad spelling, the improper placing of capital letters, deficient or profuse punctuation and the writing of proper names with small letters. All of these mistakes are found in the work of many of the young women clerks who offer themselves confidently to business houses.

The meaning of ordinary words is absolutely unknown to some of these girls, who think they can be entrusted with affairs of a large business house. Careless work is not so much the fault as an entire absence of information about facts that every public school pupil ought to know before passing out of the primary department.

I find it absolutely impossible to obtain even fairly competent help," said one of the woman partners in a successful New York office, where general public work is done.

"I pay my girl $10 and $12 per week, and I would gladly pay more if I could obtain help that warranted larger salaries, but the results are very trying.

"Even the very ordinary work of envelope addressing is bungled by young women apparently intelligent and conscientious. Certainly modern education does not fit girls for business life, and it is hard to imagine what a young woman who at 20 cannot address an envelope properly would excel at.

"When we try to employ expert help we find that girls who can command $30 a week or more prefer to hold positions in private offices. The imperfect work done by these girls is a shame to have three or four years experience with the typewriter in one of the trials of running one's own establishment.

The Standoff.
"Another dreadful trial to the stenographer who branches out as a proprietor is the slowness of many firms and individuals in paying bills. I find on inquiry that this does not apply to the work of stenographers alone, but to all professions in which women work for a living.

"Dressmakers and seamstresses are kept months waiting for their money, and even servants are left unpaid for a year in some cases. But in our line of work it is especially trying.

"We can ask no deposit, for the reason that it is not the custom to do so. We put in our own materials and time, and if we dare to ask for payment on delivery of work we are told that the work must be looked over.

"Then we are kept waiting frequently weeks and months, and in some cases years, without payment. The firms that treat us in this shabby manner would not dare to set this way to their men creditors, but for the reason that we are women they fancy they can act in this unjust manner.

law to help women workers in this respect. In our profession it is a matter which is a constant thorn in the flesh. This one item, taken in connection with the incompetent help which we have to put up with, makes the first few years of the stenography office very hard and discouraging.

"A young woman who has a good place as head stenographer with a large house, or who finds herself happily situated in some of the offices downtown where the hours are short and associations pleasant, and who commands a salary of $40 or $50 a week, is foolish to take up the responsibility of an establishment of her own.

"She at once takes on a vast load of work looking after the typewriting which goes out from her new office. Frequently she will have to sit up far into the morning correcting work done by her employees.

"She will have trouble in getting her money when work is done and she has all the burden of maintaining an expensive office, for offices in good buildings command high rents and call for proper fittings.

Work Not Up to the Mark.
"The stenographers employed in hotels are usually experts and they receive excellent pay and in some cases they get their rooms and board as well. They charge more than we do, in proportion, as their work is largely letter writing. Plans, specifications or other important documents rarely go to the hotel stenographer for typewriting.

"But the general standard of work is not up to the mark, and one of the reasons for this is that so many of the offices take in pupils in typewriting who pay for the privilege of practice.

"These girls are discharged to make room for others, and half the time they have only mastered the rudiments of the work. Indeed, in many cases, they would require to go back to school for an ordinary education.

"The supply of poor typists is inordinately large and the good ones are remarkably scarce. A first-class stenographer will understand several different forms, those for medical, legal, theatrical and literary work. She will, in many cases, be able to translate in one or two languages and take dictation in French or German.

"She is a confidential clerk, and the secrets of her employer's business must be kept. She is required to dress well, and she must be careful and obliging as well as extremely businesslike.

"But there are too many very young girls taking up the work and seeking places which they are not fitted to fill. There are also certain firms and persons who will persist in searching after low skilled operators in this field, under the impression that they can get as good work for a small amount as for a decent salary.

"But this idea is far more erroneous in this profession than in any other. A good expert stenographer and typewriter knows quite well that she can command a good salary and that there are plenty of places waiting for intelligent and businesslike

JOHN CHINAMAN AT HIS EASE

Shanghai View of the Celestial When He Casts OR the Cases of the World.

With the summer weather the Chinaman comes before us prominent in his artistic silks and in his native nakedness. His temperament also becomes a noticeable feature to the observant foreigner and the manner in which he takes his pleasures contrasts markedly with that of the energetic occidental human being.

In the early days of the morning, when the rays of Old Sol are tempered with the dissipating dews of night, the wealthy native, as well as the worker of low degree, may be seen carrying the case containing his favorite singing bird to the native gardens or other tree-embowered spot and listening in contemplative ecstasy to the joyous greeting which his caged friend pours forth to the coming glory of the day.

As soon as the golden beams become oppressive he retires to his domicile, whether to labor or sleep 'tis hard to tell. In any case, he is wise, for has he not caught the beauty of the grandest part of a summer's day, the majesty of dawn? Again, when sunset's glow has fallen dead in the west, the Chinaman pours forth to his diversion. To stand for hours with waving fan on the curb of our city's thoroughfares watching the procession of vehicular and pedestrian traffic brings him apparent delight which a Londoner can obtain from a lord mayor's show, daily repeated, while a volunteer parade brings him forth in numbers proportionate to the metropolis' myriads called out by a royal pageant.

Thus, in dignified, contemplative manner does the Chinaman display his idiosyncrasy of pleasure-taking. Again the native of younger blood, imbued with a tinge of foreign taste, rushes madly through the streets on the whirling wheel or drives, luxuriously reclining in his smartly appointed carriage, behind the fastest trotting pony, steered by a reckless native jehu which his means are able to procure.

The visitor to the various public resorts of the Chinese in the settlements will invariably gain an interesting insight into the Chinaman and his pleasure-taking, and one striking feature cannot pass unnoticed. Whether coolie, merchant, office boy or mandarin, in public the Chinaman at play is invariably respectable. One hears much of the native immorality, but decorum when in the public eye, and absolutely moral behavior characterize even the big-

SHIP'S BOY FOR FARRAGUT

Passing of a Man Who Participated in the Famous Naval Fight at Mobile.

The death of John Stack, for nearly half a century a resident of Flatbush, Long Island, marked the end of a civil war veteran who as a lad had seen service under Admiral Farragut, and it further dedicated the withering ranks of the only Grand Army post that Flatbush ever had.

Being naturally of a retiring disposition Mr. Stack was averse to exploiting his war record or even mentioning the fact that he had braved the confederate fire with Farragut at Mobile when the renowned seafighter gained immortal fame by lashing himself to the mast of the flagship Hartford.

Few of the present generation of Flatbush patriots knew Stack as other than a lifelong citizen of that section and a member of the old police department, and even his younger daughters know little of his early career as a diminutive member of Farragut's fighting force.

A scanty handful of veterans, who have grown up with Flatbush and who knew Stack for years, are, however, better informed about his war record and they recount with almost envious pride that he in a small way, in the role of "ship's boy," on the Hartford, shared the honors with Admiral Farragut on August 5, 1864, when the small union fleet, lashed into one moving mass for mutual protection, swept past the confederate shore batteries and engaged the great iron ram Tennessee in a desperate conflict, the successful conclusion of which gave the federal forces undisputed control of the harbor and paved the way for the subsequent capture of Mobile.

To some of his veteran friends Stack casually alluded to the scenes attending the memorable engagement, but his reminiscences were generally crystallized into glowing eulogiums for Admiral Farragut, whom he regarded as a comrade.

Stack was 14 years old when he shipped and the stirring events with many of its interesting details surrounding the naval innovation that Farragut established when he took for his position in the rigging and offered himself as a comrade to fight for the enemy's fire, was indelibly impressed on his mind. It was only when in the company of sympathetic comrades of the civil strife that he recounted the episode.—Brooklyn Eagle.
