London
 Time - the Present
 Dear Mary Jane
 It is hard to get into mischief in London. They haven't got the net spread for little boys like in America. I simply have to create my own stage setting and surroundings before I can get in to mischief. It has brought out my inventor's genius and as I am going to be an inventor when I grow up it is good practice for me. But I have a fine line of ideas if no one finds out my plans. I have bought electric buttons and tacks and Oh Gee! but I bet I will get a fine line of spankings. Oh well the way of the transgressor is hard. We are bound to get just what is coming to us.
 Goodbye Buster Brown
