WIFE AND BABES ARE LEFT

Young Mother with Two Little Ones Seeks Husband She Loves.

PITIFUL SCENE AT POLICE STATION

Head of Household Leaves in Search of Work When Adversity Comes and is Not Heard From.

Mrs. T. F. Newton, bearing her 2-year-old son on one arm and leading her 4-year-old daughter by the hand, walked into the office of Chief of Police Donahus and asked what she should do to secure immediate assistance for herself and children and find her husband, who has been gone nearly three weeks.

The woman, a comely little mother, and her boy and girl as neat as two pins, tried to restrain the tears as she told the chief her story. The first real cold day of the season found her without a cent, home of the necessities of life for herself and all that was left for her, her little darling. She pressed the little boy closer to her breast and wiped away a tear.

"Don't cry, mamma," the little girl said, as she laughed in childish innocence.

The chief was moved at the scene and reached down in his pocket and gave the woman a coin of generous denomination, and others standing near followed suit.

The Newtons were married five years ago Christmas eve in Omaha. The union was the result of a love romance, and both believed they would be "happy ever after." They were happy for some time. Newton is a carpenter by trade and soon after the marriage the couple went to Randolph, Neb., where Newton secured work. They bought a lot and in his spare time Newton built a cottage, small but cozy. A year elapsed and a baby girl came into the home, and there was not a happier home in Randolph. The girl was named Jessie.

Adversity Comes to Them.

A calamity came into the lives of the Newtons about a year ago. While at a picnic their home and contents were destroyed by fire, with no insurance. The little home was the ambition of Newton's life. It was all swept away at one "fell swoop," as it were. The lot was then mortgaged for necessities and the mortgagor was foreclosed. Newton lost his ambition and became discouraged. The family moved to Omaha some time ago and the husband worked at odd jobs, eking out a precarious livelihood, Mrs. Newton says.

"The last time I saw him," placed his arms around my neck and said, "Goodbye, set, I am going to work out in the coun-

OUR LETTER BOX

Injustice to the Governor.

OMAHA, Nov. 30.—To the Editor of the Bee: Under the following headlines, "Liquor men's bargain for change in the law," the Lincoln Evening News quotes the measure which the liquor people made an effort to have placed on the statute books two years ago and will cause to be introduced in the house this winter. The News charges Governor Mickey with promising his signature to the proposed law in exchange for the liquor vote. There is no truth in this assertion. Governor Mickey never promised to sign our bill and no officer of the State Liquor Dealers' association has asked him to do so. A copy of the bill was placed before him two years ago and his only answer was: "It looks on its face to be a fair proposition and I shall give it due consideration when the proper time comes. I am a servant of all people and shall endeavor to satisfy my constituents without fear or favor."

We asked for nothing more at that time and have not discussed the matter with the governor since. Quoting from the News:

Over in Omaha the hangers-on of the liquor interests are outspoken in the assertion that Governor Mickey has promised the agents of the state association of liquor dealers that he will sign this bill. It is asserted that the promise was secured about ten days before election by Secretary Keating of the state association and C. E. Fields, editor of the Protector.

The story is recited with considerable minutiae of detail how Messrs. Keating and Fields came to Lincoln upon invitation and appointment of the governor, waited upon him at the capitol and secured his promise to sign this measure if it should pass the legislature. Arrangements were at that time made for lining up the liquor interests of the state for the governor's re-election.

It is true that Messrs. Keating and Fields went to Lincoln about two weeks prior to the election to look after a damage suit pending against some of our members and incidentally called upon the governor. During our brief visit not a single word was mentioned about our bill, nor was state politics discussed.

It is true that the editor of the Protector and other officers of the association traveled over the state, but our mission was to explain the merits of our proposed law to candidates for the state legislature and urge them to support it. We did not need free railroad transportation, for the association has a plentiful supply of funds and all money used in making this canvass was drawn from our treasury. The association foots its own bills and asks no monetary favors from anybody.

Mr. Berge was shown a copy of the bill by officers of the association and gave us practically the same answer that Governor Mickey did two years ago. He was so could not pledge himself to sign it, so could not have "turned it down," as the News suggests.

Liquor dealers throughout the state did give Governor Mickey their hearty support, and for good reasons. He had been in office two years and given the people a clean administration. He did nothing in particular for the liquor interests, nor did he make a special effort to do us harm. The saloon men felt they could trust him to deal fairly with us, and the fact that the major part of the church and prohibition elements were fighting him so bitterly stimulated our people to more vigorous efforts in his behalf. Again, we were certain to have a republican senate and house this year and it would have been imprudent for us to elect a fusion governor.

The election is a thing of the past. The people have spoken and it will become a newspaper to abuse and vilify the man of their choice.

There is not now and never has been an understanding between Governor Mickey and the liquor forces. All we ask from him is fair treatment and that much we have a right to expect.

If the Lincoln News or any other newspaper feels inclined to oppose the enactment of our proposed law that is their privilege, but nothing can be accomplished by maligning the governor of our state.

HENRY KEATING,
Secretary Nebraska Retail Liquor Dealers' Association.
C. E. FIELDS,
Editor Protector.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Concert at the Boyd.

A program strangely unpretentious in its makeup and of the lightest order, musically speaking, formed the attraction at the Boyd last night. As one of the series of the Young Men's Christian association entertainments it's evident design was to please and satisfy the bulk of subscribers in their craving for something everybody could understand rather than "to elevate and educate a more pretentious caste" of music students and real art devotees. Judging from the generous applause accorded each of the "Four-Star company" (for such the program christens them) the people present responded to their offerings in a most buoyant and naively appreciative spirit. Miss Samma is a mezzo soprano whose lower tones strike a more sympathetic chord with the listener than can be said of her work above F. She sang Wilson's "Carmena," besides songs in a similarly light vein, responding to frequent encores, among which some Beechey and Wagner warblers present noticed with dual feelings. "My Drowsy-eyed Babe." Mr. Bohumir Kryl—he of those low tones on his cornet—has been with us so very recently, during May festivities, that further comment is unnecessary. Miss Mabelle Caroline Church made an excellent impression with original and highly amusing sketches of the electionary art, while Mr. Sol Heilbronner, with the dreadful handicap of a very unresponsive upright piano, played well indeed under the circumstances. And isn't it a pity that thus an artist must be deprived from exhibiting his talent on an adequate concert grand instrument?

Alfred Farland at Chambers.

Chambers' academy was filled by an enthusiastic audience last evening at the concert and recital given by Alfred A. Farland, the banjo virtuoso. The number by the orchestra received an impetuous encore, but was not responded to. Later in the evening there was another enthusiastic encore which could not be ignored.

Another attractive feature of the evening was the Gelenebeck string quartet. Two very popular airs were played, Verdi's "Miserere," from "Il Trovatore," and Moskowski's "Spanish Dance." Both took with the audience but the encore was not responded to. The interest of the evening centered in the work of Mr. Farland. His selections were from the most difficult com-
