BETTER THAN A BARBER SHOP
Improvements Added to Overland Limited from Which Tonsorial Artists Are Dropped.

Beginning the first of the year the barber shop will be taken off the "Overland Limited" train running between Chicago and Ogden. While this convenience will be eliminated from the trains, additions are to be made which promise to exceed in splendor and convenience anything which the traveling public has yet enjoyed on these rolling palaces.
The reason for the discontinuance of the barber shop is not clear except that it never was liberally patronized. The male proportion of passengers traveling on the Overland is large enough to support two barber shops, but there seems to be a horror in the minds of the average man against being shaved on the cars. While the movement of the coach in which the tonsorial parlor is located is smooth enough to do the finest penmanship, yet there is occasionally lurch enough to throw a nervous man into spasms when he is undergoing an operation on the cars for the removal of his capillary adornment.
The conveniences to be added to the Overland, it is asserted at the Union Pacific headquarters, are destined to make a man forget such a trivial thing as the elimination of the traveling tonsorial artist. A new competition observation car is to be added which for interior magnificence is several points ahead of anything yet attempted.
These cars will be supplied with a smoking room, absolutely shut off from the rest of the coach, and it will be supplied with writing desks and a men's cafe. The lighting arrangement will be such that each man will have his own lamp at an elevation so that he can read by it without the danger of straining his eyesight. The greatest feature of the new train, however, will be the Pullman palace sleeper, which will have double drawing rooms, furnished in the most princely fashion. They will be lighted with electricity throughout, and besides being furnished with the telegraphic news service twice daily, there will be telephone communication between the coaches and the terminal cities where the train happens to be waiting. This will enable a passenger to transact business from the coach.
While the changes are adopted by the Union Pacific and the Northwestern in their combination train, it is a change which the Milwaukee was a strong factor in bringing about in order to give the passengers of the Milwaukee coaches the same advantages that were enjoyed in the other cars of the Overland Limited.
