The commission calls attention to the expediency of disbanding the organization. The commission calls attention to the fact that there has been no amendatory legislation conferring power over this rate and making the orders of the commission effective. In the present state of the law, after careful and often extended investiga-tion, the commission may find a rate com-plained against to be unreasonable and order the carrier to desist from charging that rate for the future; but it cannot, though the evidence may and usually does The matter was discussed pro and con and it was finally decided to let the final determination of the question go over until January 3, when it will be definitely de cided.

Since the publication of the article in order the carrier to desist from charging that rate for the future; but it cannot, though the evidence may and usually does indicate it, find and order the reasonable rate to be substituted for that which has been found to be unlawful. Any reduction of the wrongful charge amounts to tech-nical compilance and frees the carrier from any degal obligation under the order. The commission can condemn the wrong, but it cannot prescribe the remedy. Two cases of unreasonable rates decided during the year are cited as showing some reductions from the rates found unreasonable, but which were not so great as those recommended by the commission. Carriers are entitled to ignore the order of the commission and await the judgment of the commission and await the judgment of the cort. The more important the case in that court. The more important the case The Bee showing the severe financial straits of the company, a number of business men have taken the matter up and one or two substantial contributions have been made to the company's treasury to help the boys tide over their present finan cial stringency.

Captain W. E. Baebr, commanding th company, has been invited to meet with the Commercial club at noon today to explain the situation of the company before that body of business men. He has also in that court. The more Important the case may be the greater upon shippers or community likely is the order of the comthe greater the benefit conferred securing quarters for the company in the upon shippers or communities, the less likely is the order of the commission to be obeyed. The commission must not only render a just decision, but one that is con-vincing to the carrier, to afford the relief from unlawful rates contemplated in the statute. If the decision of the commission is right, the public is entitled to have it go into effect. If it is wrong, its operation could be enjoined upon showing to that effect by the carrier in a solitable and sum-mary proceedings in the federal court. The amendments to the statute recommended by the commission involve no fixing of whole tariffs of rates in the first instance or at any time, but simply the redressing of transportation during which all affected interests have been heard; and when an order is issued against a carrier unler such procedure, it should by operation of law become effective upon the date therein specified. that the matter will be decided by the time of the January meeting of the company. Captain Bachr said last evening: "The boys do not want to disband the company if it can be possibly avoided. It depends on what assistance we can receive from the husiness interests of Omaha and the state authorities whether we quit. The tax upon us as individuals to keep the organization up is a little more than ,we feel that we should be required to bear.

Much Injustice Practiced.

Much injustice Practiced. In the fixing of rates by carriers upon all commodities for transportation in all direc-tions and between all points reached by railroads, it is inevitable that much injus-tice, unfairness, unreasonableness, prefer-ence and discrimination will be practiced, notwithstanding the greatest care and ripest judgment may be exercised by the railway officials. These errors of judg-n ant on the part of the railway officials constitute the reason for federal regulation and the basis of the present widespread de-mand for an amendment of the existing statute which will enable their speedy cor-rection. The commission alludes to the persisten The commission alludes to the persistent misrepresentation by many who are inter-ested in opposing this legislation, that the amendments desired would confer upon the commission the power to arbitrarily initiate or make rates for the railways and that it would be most dangerous to place this vast authority in the hands of five men, espe-cially five men who have had no experience as railway traffic managers. No such power has been asked by or is seriously sought to be conferred upon the commission.
