TEACHERS' MEETING AT END

Closing Session of Thirty-Ninth Annual Convention Held Last Night.

RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE'S FINAL REPORT

Juvenile Court, Scientific Temperance, Free High Schools and Certification of Teachers Warmly Endorsed by Body.

The thirty-ninth annual meeting of the Nebraska State Teachers' association came to an end last evening at the First Methodist church. The seating capacity of the church was taxed to its utmost with the visiting teachers and their friends to enjoy the closing program of music and an illustrated lecture on "Russia and Japan" by Frank R. Robinson. The music was furnished by the Wagner chorus and quartet of this city. The first number on the program was a vocal chorus, "The Briar Rose," from Verlior, rendered by the entire Wagner chorus.

The committee on resolutions then presented the following report, which was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The Nebraska State Teachers' association has been so cordially received and so royally entertained by the teachers and citizens of the city of Omaha, and county superintendents. That we hereby express our appreciation of the able and efficient administration of our state by the superintendent, W. C. Fowler. May he have equal success in all his future endeavors.

PAUL GOSS,
M. R. SNODGRASS,
GEORGE P. GRIFFITH.

No More Life Members.

A delegate then gave notice that he would present a motion at the next annual meeting of the association to strike out section 2 of article II of the constitution, which related to life members; also that the words "except life members" be stricken from section 3 of article III of the constitution and that section 3 be hereafter designated as section 2.

The proposition was designed to do away with the feature of life membership. The Wagner quartet then gave another selection and responded with an encore, after which Mr. Robinson gave his illustrated lecture on Russia and Japan.

Superintendent W. C. Fowler was then called forward and presented with a handsome gold watch on behalf of the members of the association by Superintendent O'Connor of Norfolk.

The presentation address was brief and Prof. Fowler was very evidently taken completely by surprise at this manifestation of esteem and was too overcome with emotion to make reply.

The new president of the association, J. W. Scammon of Wahoo, was presented to the association and spoke briefly of the appreciation he felt at the distinguished honor bestowed upon him.

The retiring president, E. J. Bodwell of Omaha, took occasion to express his gratitude for the loyalty shown him by the association and the various committees of the association during his administration, and then formally declared the thirty-ninth annual session closed.

The registration up to last night was in round numbers 2,000, the largest attendance in the history of the association, and exceeding the previous high water mark of attendance at Lincoln in 1897 by 200.

The visitors universally express themselves as more than gratified with their treatment in Omaha and the hospitality shown them on all hands.

Branches Elect Officers.

At the close of the afternoon session of the association the branches elected officers. In the college group Prof. W. R. Jackson of Wesleyan was chosen president and President D. B. Perry of Crete secretary. In the high school section E. P. Wilson of Ponca was chosen for president, John P. Mathews of Grand Island vice-president and J. B. Blackwood of Steele City secretary. The county superintendents' division chose Superintendent Arnot president and Elizabeth Marker of Webster county secretary. In the primary division Mrs. Sarah Brindley of Columbus was chosen president and Mrs. Oretta Chittenden secretary.

The women of the Annuity and Aid association served tea in a room prettily decorated with greens, flowers and bric-a-brac. Miss Anna Fouse of the Kellogg school is at the head of this association.

In the various rooms the session of the sections were carried on simultaneously. Dr. C. E. Bossey of the University of Nebraska was the principal speaker in the college section. His paper related to the feasible solution of the problem of financing the college course and determining an equitable amount of culture for the B. A. degree as offered by the "grade" system. The professor's address was very well received, but did not have the discussion it deserved because of the lateness of the hour. He was to have been the first speaker, but did not arrive because of a late train until the afternoon was well passed.

Blind Insisted on Indulgence.

Dr. W. C. Huntington, chancellor of Wesleyan university, spoke on "The Social Functions of Our Colleges: Their Uses and Abuses." The chancellor held man appointed by different nations to investigate the effects of alcohol on the human system and formulate some means to prevent degeneration through the use of alcohol. Scientific temperance education, he said, has come to be generally recognized as necessary to this end.

Mrs. Hunt represented the United States government at the conference held in Europe recently to consider this subject and was later summoned by the empress of Germany to further explain the work as proposed by her and the systems that have been employed in the public schools of the various states since 1882. Mrs. Hunt advocated its introduction into the curriculum of the schools and, she said, as statistics show that the school life of the average child in this country is about five years, that it be introduced in the primary and lower grades and a substantial foundation laid there for further and better understanding, as it has been recently in some of the countries of western Europe, who have come to recognize its need.

Superintendent W. M. Davidson of the Omaha public schools changed his subject from "A Trinity of Aims in Education," as had been announced, to "Some Defects in Teachers' I Have Known," for the reason, he explained, that his subject had been so well covered by President Dowling and Miss Arnold on Boston Thursday. He assured his audience the flaws he referred to had been found previous to his advent in Nebraska.

"It ought not to be an unpleasant task to anyone to study defects in teaching," said the speaker. "Neither will such study lower the character or quality of a teacher's work. Indeed, just as a teacher masters science of pedagogics of defects, written though it be, just in that proportion will she reach a position from which she is likely to make a healthy and robust advancement in the character of her work."

And then, after a common sense discussion, sympathetic to the teacher and the child alike, the following faults were presented:

First—The failure to manifest sufficiently the small matters and details of the school, lack of proper courtesy to children.

Second—Lack of proper preparation for the work of teaching.

Third—Lack of general culture acquired by general reading.

Fourth—Lack of interest in the things that interest the child; no sympathy with children.

Fifth—Lack of patience.

Sixth—Failure to get results because of growing weary in well doing.

Seventh—No well defined notion as to what to require of the pupils in discipline, study or preparation.

Eighth—No grasp of the subjects they are trying to teach.

Ninth—Failure to confine the lesson within the period designated.

Tenth—Teachers who have no heart in their work.

Eleventh—Those who hurry to make rash haste.

Twelfth—Marking time.

Thirteenth—Lax and lackadaisical in reclamation.

Fourteenth—Nonpunctuality.

Fifteenth—Turning from the lessons of one class to discipline the other class.

Sixteenth—Failure to lead teachers to do quick, rapid work.

Seventeenth—Giving too much attention to slow pupils.

Eighteenth—Fussiness.

Nineteenth—Crushing the life out of a class by tyrannical discipline; inability to govern by kindness.

Twentieth—Confounding the idea of order and keeping still the real discipline.

Twenty-first—Yielding to bad temper; self-control.

Twenty-second—Never positive about anything.

Twenty-third—Never positive about anything.

Twenty-fourth—Not knowing how to draw out a child's knowledge.

Twenty-fifth—Being able to see mistakes in others' work, but none in his own.

Twenty-sixth—An excess of timidity or egotism.

Twenty-seventh—Teachers who never clinch anything in a recitation.

Twenty-eighth—The "barber shop" teacher with her cry of "Next," "Next," at the failure of every pupil, and lastly, the teacher who never knows how to visit other schools.

Though W. N. Clifford was for the second time given the platform, he courteously withdrew, saying that while he appreciated the courtesy of the house, it was noon, and he considered that it was due to the teachers to be allowed to adjourn.

MISS CLARA MASON ON DISCIPLINE

Omaha Principal Reads Paper on Government of Primaries.

Miss Clara B. Mason, principal of the Clifton Hill school in Omaha, read a paper on "Discipline in the Primary Grades" at the primary section meeting in room 204 of the high school Friday afternoon. Miss Mason was one of the few women on the program of the National Educational association's meeting in Boston in 1903, when she read her paper on "Nebraska Experiments in Co-operation of Public Libraries with Public Schools." Following is a part of Miss Mason's paper on discipline:

most as many varieties of that needful part of school economy as there are teachers present today. But these manifold varieties will cluster around a few prominent kinds, which will touch us all more or less at some point
