ORR STICKS TO HIS STORY

Bootlegger's Testimony Not Shaken by Summers' Stiff Oross-Examination,

MORE DETAILS OF HOMER'S BULLPENS

Places Where Winnebago Indians Had No Trouble Securing Whisky and Beer in Pienty.

The trial of the saleon conspiracy cases from Homer was resumed before Judge Munger in the United States district court Monday morning.

The direct examination of Frank Orr was continued. The gist of his direct examination was that he had sold whisky to Charles Raymond and other Winnebago Indians frequently in the bull pen in rear of the saloons of the defendants, Sherman Ennis and Ed Luikhart. These sales had been made after the agreement with the defendants, and he received his commissions from these sales. He frequently saw Alonzo Shaw, "Featherlegs," there engaged in the same business. He had also frequently sold liquor to Peter Sampson, another Indian.

Orr was subjected to a most rigid cross examination by W. S. Summers, attorney Lukhart out. I was in the bull pen ten or for the saloonists, but his testimony was not shaken in the slightest. The crossexamination drew out the fact that Frank Orr's home was near Rockford, in Gage county, Neb., and that prior to his engaging in the business of a professional bootlegger he had worked on a farm for two of his brothers near Homer, and just prior to going to Homer he had worked for Jim O'Connor, living one and a half miles from Homer. He was arrested on the morning of September 22, 1904, for bootlegging and pleaded guilty to the charge in November, 1904, and had been in the Douglas county jail since, but had not been sentenced.

No Promise of Clemency. Up to this time he had not been ar raigned for pleading for the indictment of conspiracy, nor had he ever been told by any one that he would be let down easy if he would become a government witness in this conspiracy case. He never told Deputy Marshal Sides or Charles Meaney in the county jail that he was informed that he would be let off easy if he pleaded guillty to the charge of bootlegging and would testify against Luikhart and Ennis. Luikhart, Ennis and others visited him in the Douglas county jail Thursday to talk with him relative to his testimony in this case. He told them that he could do nothing else but swear to it, that is regarding his contract with them about selling liquor to the Indians. Luikhart said to him: "Why are you going to do that?" Witness glid not tell them Thursday that Sides and others promised him if he would swear to the Luikhart and Ennis would get h-l and go to prison. Nor did he ever tell Luikhart in the presence of any one that there was no understanding between him and Luikhart and Ennis; neither did he say that he had ever made statement that neither Luikhart or Ennis

Making the Agreements. Witness further testified that it was Ennis who made the original proposition in August, 1963, that witness should engage in the bootlegging business for him (Ennis) at Homer Ennis and Luikhart were farmers and he made subsequent agreement of like nature with Luikhart a day or two after. The agreement with both was that they would furnish the liquor; witness was to sell it to the Indians and get the commission, "And I got busy at once." Witness May 1, 1994, to sell to Indians. He got it the Indians who used them. from another saloon, in which Lulkart was tending bar, and the agreement was the same as before.

new at any time that witness was selling or giving liquor to Indians.

Some time after this witness went to Denver with Logan Lambert and one or two others with a string of four horses. The horses belonged to Harry Rasdell. (Both Lambert and Rasdell are under a like indictment as saloonists for conspiracy in selling liquor to Indians. Witness did not return to Homer after his return from Denyer until September 19, coming there from South Dakota, and he then went immediately into the bootlegging business, and was arrested on September 22. In his redirect examination Orr stated that he was served with a subpoena as a witness in this case in the same manner as other witnesses were served. He was not promised any immunity for testifying against Luikhart and Ennis. He then related, in brief, the conversation held between him and Luikhart, Meaney and Elnnis in the Douglas county jail Thursday

Indiana Who Bought Liquor. The next witness was Prosper Armell (Ammell), a Winnebago Indian, who testified that he had frequently bought liquor of Orr. Orr identified Armell as one to whom he had sold liquor, and Armell identified Orr as the person from whom he had frequently bought liquor.

Mr. Summers, attorney for the defense, objected to this witness testifying, on the ground that he was not named in the indictment and that he gave his name as Ammell instead of Armell. The objection was overruled by the court.

Armell stated that he was a Winnebago Indian and a member of that tribe. He first met Orr in Luikhart & Ennis' saloon in Homer. He knew Orr was a professional bootlegger and bought liquor from him a number of times. He got the liquor at the bull pen behind the saloon. He had known Luikhart three or four years. He had a talk with Luikhart at one time, once or twice. Luikhart handed him $1 at one ime and $1.25 at another and told the witness to "help him."

Inside the Bullpen.

Continuing, he said: "I went to Orr and got my whisky from Frank Orr, paying him the money I got from Luikhart. I undertood that the money was given me to help a dozen times. I went in there once with Whitehead, who bought a can of beer from Featherlegs and treated us all round. Whitehead gave Featherlegs money, but he got no change back. I have seen other Indians, Yellowback and others in the bull pen once in a while. Featherless and Orr were the only bootleggers I saw there."

This witness was not cross-examined. Henry Hardin, a Winnebago Indian, was the next witness. He recognized Orr. Had seen him back of the saloon. Orr had frequently got liquor for him. It was whisky, a half gallon, for which he paid Orr $2. Charley Raymond, another Indian, was with him at the time he bought the whisky from Orr. He bought whisky three times Charley Raymond was with him each time Once he got about a pint and paid Orr a dollar for it. Orr got the liquor from Ennis' saloon and gave it to him back of the sa-

Hardin wanted an interpreter to talk for him, as he bore all the evidence of having had a good time during the past day or two and he was very sleepy. He could talk good enough English and the interpreter was denied him by the court.

In his cross-examination, which involved but one question, he stated that he had bought liquor but three times of Orr, but admitted that he did not keep much record

Indian Who Never Drinks. The first witness called Monday afternoon was Hugh Hunter, a very intelligent Winnebago Indian, who speaks English fluently. His testimony was mainly to corroborate the tribal relations of several of the Winnebago Indian witnesses, he being a clerk at the Indian agency. He testified that the several Indian witnesses were members of the Winnebago tribe, and that they were allotees of Indian lands, and as such are under the supervision of the present Indian agent, H. G. Wilson, ac they had been under Charles T. Matthewson, his predecessor. The witness also knew Ennis and Luikhart and had known them for three or four years past. Prior to their engaging in the saloon business on the Winnebago reservation. Hunter had been in the saloons of the defendants three or four times, merely through curiosity. He did not drink himself, nor had he ever bought or tasted liquor of any did not get any liquor from Ennis after by their appearance and their effect upon kind. He only knew the different liquors

News About the Bull Pens He described the bull pens in rear of the saloons, and the methods by which they were reached from the back doors of the saloons, and the side doors in the alleys. He had seen many Indians in the bull pens in various stages of intoxication at different times. He also saw them buy liquor in bottles and jugs from the bootleggers, Orr and Featherlegs. The liquor was procured from the saloons. He also saw other white men or boys get liquor for the Indians at other times while they were in the bull pens and saw the Indians pay the bootleggers for the liquor. He mentioned several Indians of the Winnebago tribe who ought liquor in the bull pens. When asked if he could give the names of all the Indians who got liquor at the built pens he replied: "If I was to mention all have seen get liquor there I would have to mention half of the Winnebago tribe of Indians." He specifically mentioned Joe Johnson, Louis Grayhair, Prosper Armell, James Yellowback, Henry Hardin, Henry Decorah and others, all of whom he saw buy liquor of Orr in the bull pens back of the Ennis saloon. In his cross-examination he stated that he lived on the reservation nearly all his life. He visited Homer frequently, sometimes twice a week, and sometimes only once a month. He never went into the bull pens for any other purpose than to see what the Indians were doing there. He did not know what they drank, nor had he ever bought any liquor for himself or others, because he did not use it: "I never tried to use liquor and I never want to."

Grayhair Bought Plenty.

Louis Grayhair, a Winnebago Indian, testified through an interpreted, John Pelky. The defense also asked for an interpreter and secured David St. Cyr for that purpose. Grayhair testified that he had bought liquor from "Little Man," whom the Indians know as Frank Orr. He paid $1 a quart for the liquor, and bought it in the bull pens. "Little Man" got the whisky out of the saloon and took the money into the saloon. Wtiness never talked to Ennis. because he could not understand him. This witness was not cross-examined.

Henry Decorah also testified through the interpreter. He knew Orr and had bought lquor of him in the bull pen. Joe Johnson, another Winnebago, testified iquor of Featherlegs. He always paid Orr he money for the liquor before he got it.

Witness and Featherlegs were not always on the best of terms.

All Tell Same Story. The other witnesses of the afternoon were Simon Payer, a former member of the tribe. who had a very bad memory; Louis Levering, an Omaha Indian; Blackbird Sheridan, also an Omaha Indian, each of whom testified to having bought liquor of Orr and Peatherlegs in the bull pens and paying the usual price of $1 per quart for it. Sheridan said: "I went into the back room of the new Ennis saloon and saw some barrels of whisky there, and tasted them to see which I liked best before I bought." George Richin, a Winnebago, testified that he had also gone into the back room to tasto the whisky and bought that which te liked best. The hearing was then adjourned until 9 'clock this morning.

SACRED HEART FAIR OPENS

Basar for Benefit of Church and School Gets Good Start.

MAIDS AND MATRONS IN ATTENDANCE

Visitors Warmly Welcomed and a Good Time Assured Everyone Who Takes Occasion to Call at the Booths.

All things considered, the bazaar being given this week by the Sacred Heart Catholic church in the parish hall. Twentysecond and Binney streets, was auspiciously opened last evening. The bazaar is for the benefit of the Sacred Heart church and school and is in capable hands. The chief feature of last evening's entertainment in connection with the fair was an address by Rev. Edmund Hayes of Imogen, Ia. Rev. Mr. Hayes was introduced by D. J. O'Brien, who prefaced the introduction by a few felicitous remarks. The parish ball has been tastily decorated for the occasion by pretty bunting and flowers, the shades of which mingle to advantage with the lights. Added to this the attractive booths presided over by winning maids and matrons who act as money changers, the visitor is greeted with a picture that is at once pleasant to behold. And be it said to the credit of the aforementioned maids and matrons they certainly succeed in their purpose, that of separating the visitors from their coin. That is what the bazzar is for and that is what the people go for, and it is then up to the daintily gowned vendors of novelties and sweetments to get busy. As there was a preponderance of women folk in the audience last evening it has been ordered that every woman who attends hereafter without a male accompaniment will be fined.

Truth in Religion Rev. Edmund Hayes gave a scholarly talk last evening on "Truth in Religion." He said:

The truth in religion is the greatest thing that can engage the mind of man. It is the antithesis of atheism and teaches the knowledge of God and our relations to Him. It is a natural infallibility inspired by God. In the halcyon days of the past it left us something worth living for. God has given us a guide in these truths and Christ as a teacher. Christ was a divinely appointed teacher and taught well. He Christ as a teacher. Christ was a divinely appointed teacher and taught well. He taught what all men may understand, and understand without doubts or misgivings. There is no occasion for disagreement among men as to these great truths. We must admit that God left us easy means to arrive at the truth. Christ appointed the apostles to teach the world and establish a permanent organization. He told the napostles to go and teach unto all the naapostles to teach the world and establish a permanent organization. He told the apostles to go and teach unto all the nations and bapitze them in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, saying He would be with them to the end of the world. It cannot be gainsaid that Christ intended His teachings to be perpetuated by a perpetual body, of which Peter is the head. There is but one body on earth that claims to teach the truth by divine authority; there is but one body of whose tenets it can be said there is not the least scintilla of doubt and which tenets are as precise as a mathematical prob-

HAD TO HIDE IT

A mother wrote us recently that she had to keep Scott's Emulsion under lock and key -her children used to drink it whenever her back was turned. Strange that children should like something that is so good for them. It's usually the other way. Scott's Emulsion makes children comfortable, makes them fat and rosy-cheeked. Perhaps that's why they like it so much-they know it makes them feel good.

WOMAN IN CLUB AND CHARITY

The approaching blennial convention o the Iowa Federation of Women's clubs to be held May 10, 11 and 12 at Waterloo is just now holding a prominent place in the interest of thousands of club women aside rom those living within the state of Iowa. Largest in the general organization, in point of number of clubs, the Iowa Federation is among the best organized and most progressive and its blennial program this year will compare with that of any of the states. Though the official announcement has not yet been made, there are several features that have already been arranged or. The Irving, at Waterloo, has been deided upon as blennial headquarters during the convention. Mrw Sarah S. Platt Decker, president of the General Federation, will be the guest of honor and will address the meeting at Wednesday evening's session. Wednesday will be presi dent's night instead of the closing evening, as is customary, this change having been made to suit the convenience of Mrs. Decker. A council of officers and club residents and committee members will be held Tuesday evening preceding the openng session. Among the other speakers will be Miss Jane Addams of Hull House, Chicago, who will talk on "Child Labor." Prof. Zeublin of the University of Chicago will deliver addresses on "Arts and Crafts and "Civic Improvement." Mrs. Arthur Courtney Nevill of the Household Ecoomics School of Correspondence of Arnour institute will be the principal speaker on the domestic science program. Mrs. Lydia Avery Cocnley Ward of Chicago will speak of "Juvenile Courts and the Probaion System," and Hon. J. F. Lacey of Oskaloosa will speak on "Forestry." Dr Edward A. Steiner of Grinnell college will ontribute a lecture on Russia during the educational section. Other interesting features are being planned and will be ansounced after the conference of the executive committee with the local biennial committee of Waterloo, to be held at Marshalltown February 28, on invitation of Mrs. Fletcher, state president.

Announcements of the Theaters. Music lovers who wish to avail themselves of the opportunity to hear Ysaye, the celebrated violinist, should attend the coming concert in Omaha on Thursday evening, as it is not probable that another opportunity will be presented soon. Ysaye has announced his intention of giving up his career as a violin soloist when the present tour is finished and devoting himself to orchestral conducting. Since Ysaye's arrival in this country his success has been without parallel in the musical records of the United States. The critics unite in estimating him the greatest of living violinists. Such musical analysts as Philip Hale, Leonard Liebling, H. E. Krehbiel, I. E. Orchard, J. H. Henderson and Louis C. Elson concur in the opinion that great as was Ysaye when he last toured this country, he is much greater now. The coming of this artist to Omaha is a significant event, and now that the sale of seats has opened one realizes the excitement that his visit is creating. The regular sale commences today.

This evening at the Boyd theater the favorite Irish comedian and sweet singer, Andrew Mack, will be seen in his latest and in many ways most successful play, "The Way to Kenmare." This is a comedy of modern times, with a distinct flavor of Bee these patterns, which usually retail at Irish romance, and one that gives the star a splendid chance to show his versatility. He has been wonderfully popular in the piece, and his engagement here is exciting much inquiry, so that it is sure to draw good patronage. He will be here on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and a special matinee on Wednesday.

Among the excellent features on the bill at the Orpheum this week is a little sketch written by Robert Burns Mantel, the dramatic critic of the Chicago Inter Ocean, entitled "When Virginia Was Eighteen." that takes rank among the very best one-act comedies that have been seen here And it is presented by James O. Barrows, John Lancaster and company. Seats are now on sale for next week at the Orpheum, when the attraction wil be the Orpheum show.

FINANCES OF SCHOOL BOARD

Member McCague Criticises Action Taken by Treasurer Hennings.

REDEMPTION OF BONDS UNDER QUESTION

Resolution Calling for Statement of All Transactions Relative to Investment of Bond Redemption Fund Adopted.

City Treasurer Hennings was criticised by Chairman McCague of the finance committee of the Board of Education last night for haste in attempting to invest $47,000 of the bond redemption fund in 5 per cent bonds issued by the district 1888 and 1892. Mr. McCague said that Treasurer Hennings had acted without instructions from the committee and in a manner contrary to its plans, it having been deemed best to wait awhile before making efforts to purchase the bonds which were offered under the advertisement made by the treasurer, first at $105, the price then dropping gradually to $104.45. The latter figure was considered too high, and with the others was rejected. In his report to the board, Treasurer Hennings said he had waited a "reasonable" length of time after instruction to make the transfer of the money to the bond redemption fund and, receiving no further orders, had proceeded to try to make the investment, inasmuch as the district was losing about $4.75 a day by not doing so. On these points Chalrman McCague did not agree.

Member McCague also introduced a resdution, which was adopted, calling for a detailed statement of all bond redemption fund investments from the treasurer and directing the secretary to hereafter keep a record of the same, the idea being, as was explained, to enable the finance committee to keep a close check on the fund.
