VON HALLER'S CASE WELL ON

Jury Secured and Taking of Evidence Has Made Fair Start.

WIVES EXCLUDED FROM COURT ROOM

Women Interested in Proceedings Requested to Retire by Order of Court on Motion of Defendants' Attorneys.

At the opening of the criminal court Wednesday morning Judge Day, at the request of the lawyers for the defense, made a rule excluding from the court room all witnesses in the case except the one who might be on the stand. This ruling, of course, took out of the court room both Mrs. Von Haller and Mrs. Rees. The former went to the corridor of the court house with her little daughter, while Mrs. Rees and her son were placed in Judge Day's room. Hubermann Gives Testimony. Adolph Hubermann, who was with Von Haller on the evening when the killing of Maurice D. Rees occurred, told of their actions on that night after he met Von Haller at the Arcade hotel shortly after 7 o'clock. He said they had been drinking and that Von Haller had drunk both beer and whiskey. According to Hubermann's testimony he had endeavored to dissuade his friend from drinking, as he was in a quarrelsome humor and had taken a revolver away from him for the same reason. This he had given back to Von Haller after they left the saloon of John Behrens and before they went to the little station on the Missouri Pacific, where the killing occurred. Hubermann's story of the shooting which resulted in the death of Rees was practically as has already been outlined. Rees' dog barked at them as they approached. Von Haller declared his intention to shoot the dog, and while approaching the station building for that purpose Rees appeared in his night shirt, with a revolver in his hand. Hubermann said Von Haller started toward Rees as soon as he saw him and the two men clinched when they met. As they wrestled he saw the flash and heard the sound of a shot. Then Rees fell and Von Haller piled onto him and began beating him over the head with his revolver. Rees said nothing except "My God" or "Oh, God." Describing the appearance of Mrs. Rees on the scene, Hubermann said she came out of the house screaming, having seen the struggle from the window. She ran over and seized her husband in her arms to drag him away. Von Haller approached her and pointed the revolver at her, but she caught his arm and pushed it up. Two shots were fired by Von Haller, Hubermann said, while Mrs. Rees was trying to drag her husband's body away from him. Finally Hubermann succeeded in pulling his companion away, and as he was jerked aside he took a parting kick at the man who was shot and lying at his wife's feet on the small platform of the station. Photographs of the scene of the crime were introduced and the spot where the shooting occurred was located, against the protest of attorneys for the defense. Hubermann's direct examination occupied nearly three hours, being very much and tedious. Cross-examination was begun shortly before noon, but did not develop anything new. Cross-examination of Hubermann continued until 4 o'clock, but without materially changing his testimony. Mrs. Charlotte Rees, wife of the man who was killed, was the second witness called. Her story was elicited in a very tedious manner. It took almost an hour to get her husband out of the house with his revolver in his hand. Sparring between counsel and the timidity of Mrs. Rees in answering County Attorney Shabaugh's questions made it difficult to tell just what her story of the trouble is or would be. So far as can be judged, it does not differ in any great degree from the story of Hubermann as to the circumstances after she appeared on the scene. Mrs. Rees identified the revolver which her husband had taken from the dresser in their room when he went out to investigate dressed only in his nightgown. She could not declare whether or not it was loaded. She heard two shots before she got out, and the evident intention of the defense is to endeavor to show that Rees might have fired at least one of them.

The amount of money usually carried on this train is not large. The trainmen are of the opinion that the robbers did not secure more than $2,000.
