A coincidence so happy as to suggest prearrangement occurred not long ago to a young Omaha man and a Lincoln society girl to whom the friends of both have been looking for some time to confirm an engagement rumer. A few weeks ago the local society chronicles announced departure of this young man and his mother and niece for Honolulu, to remain until spring. About the same time the smart people of Lincoln bid adieu to this young woman and a member of her famfly who were departing for the west with no definite destination or plans, but word has come back that both parties chanced

The resolutions at the head of this note, which were adopted at St. Louis, define clearly two of the evils of child labor which must be brought to an end and one might almost say that if these two were absolutely unknown we should have no need of a committee. OMAHA HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The the last week the parliamentary law classes under his charge were turned over to the class members. The new "social hour" continues as it has begun. The majority of the students are opposed to it and will not lend their ef-forts to make it successful. From the be-ginning the innovation was considered by the students as an infringement on their rights, and consequently they appear to be unanimous in "killing" the order. The students desire the reinstatement of the old order of things, that they be permitted to converse in the halls with their classmates. They seem to forget, however, that A. H. Waterhouse granted the "social period" of his own pleasure, after representations had been made to him that his order prohibit-ing social groups of students in the halls mornings and evenings would be incom-patible with the nest interests of the school. He granted, therefore, this so-called "so-cial hour," after school, until 2:46 p. m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays (pro-vided there are no society meetings) as an experiment. Should this corporting a social pour ided there are no society meetings) as an xperiment. Should this experiment prove vided there are no society meetings) as an experiment. Should this experiment prove to be a failure the "social hour" will prob-ably be abolished and the previous rule forbidding students to assemble at any time in the halls for the purpose of socia-bility, before and after school, be rigidly enforced.
