The alleged Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky was bought from them in every quantity from gill to gallon. Honest farmers called in sleighs and took the goods away with them by the jugful. Enterprising young men interviewed the proprietors about buying Duffy's in barrels, until Hagen & Travers must have thought that they had a gold mine.

The day of reckoning came when the sucourt granted an injunction against Hagen & Travers, restraining them from selling the alleged spurious goods. The damages will probably follow.

The daily line at the box office of the Boyd theater indicates a great interest in the approaching engagement of the Henry W. Savage company, which is presenting "Parsifal" in English. The great success that has attended this undertaking in other cities is certain to be repeated in Omaha. St. Louis, where the company is appearing this week, has turned out in greater throngs than ever before, and it is now estimated that the week's receipts will reach $35,000. In Omaha the scale of prices is somewhat below that of St. Louis, the lowest priced seat there being $1, while here it is but 50 cents, and the highest good seats for each performance may still be obtained.

Buckeye Banquet.

The Ohio association, composed of former residents of the Buckeye state and their families, will hold its sixteenth annual banquet at the Millard hotel on March 24. Committees to arrange various details were appointed Thursday evening at a meeting of the general committee.

All former residents of Ohio are invited to come to the banquet and bring their families. This invitation includes those in Nebraska and Iowa, in Orasha and Council Bluffs especially. A strong delegation is expected from Council Bluffs, where the local association has a hundred members. There will be a large reception committee to wait on the guests. A program will be given before the banquet. The general committee will meet again next Thursday night.

LEGAL GIANTS IN BATTLE

is Eloquently Argued. The Fortunes of the King" at the

Mr. James K. Hackett and company in "The Fortunes of the King." a melodrama in four acts; by Mrs. Charles A. Doremus and Mr. Leonidas Westerveldt. The cast: sentations of Their Contentions to the Jury.

"The Fortunes of the King" is a draught from a perennial spring of romance. No time in history abounds with thrilling tales and adventures such as those that cluster around the Cromwellian days of England. The literature of the language overflows with them, and it is not too much to say that no one has yet drank to surfeit of the tide. It is this, probably, that led Mrs. Doremus and Mr. Westerveldt to this never-falling source for the play they have furnished for the uses of Mr. James K. Hackett. One little regret slips in to mar the satisfaction that might otherwise have been perfect. One could easily wish that the dramatists had shown a trifle more of skill in putting together the material they selected. Liberties taken with historical facts are easily forgiven when the alteration has been deftly done.

Mr. Hackett gives to Charles Stuart certain very admirable and even lovable qualities that are not ascribed to Charles II, even by his most energetic apologists. This too, is a pardonable liberty, for Mr. Hackett is dealing with the merry monarch at a time when the clouds hung darkest over his head, and when, indeed, he was but a soldier of fortune. It is not at all improbable that then, if ever, Charles Stuart had serious thoughts. At any rate, Mr. Hackett dignity, of seriousness and carelessness, and makes the wandering heir to the overturned throne of England quite a likeable fellow. In the second and third acts, in which the action of the play draws to its climax, Mr. Hackett comports himself with a restraint and a gallantry that certainly might be an attribute to either a king or a yeoman, but which is very manly in its genuineness. Miss Charlotte Walker, who is one of the most beautiful women seen on the stage here in many a moon, shares with Mr. Hackett the credit for the success of the play. In the scene of the second act she is most admirable. Her manners and her speech are those of coy and joyous girlhood, and her earnestness is that of pure faith. In the third and fourth acts, where she has little to do, she bears off her anticlimactic efforts very well. It would be a pleasure to see Miss Walker in a role that would afford her better opportunity for her apparent ability. The company in general is good. Peter Lang's old colonel is a very good piece of work. Mr. Frank is somewhat handicapped gent young negro was a member of the author has placed him. It is not at all likely that even a captain under Ireton would have used to win a girl's heart by the methods he adopts, nor is it at all likely that one who had both his experience and insentive would have allowed the captive to so easily slip through his hands. But Mr. dently intended to be, and is in nowise to be held for any error of judgment on the part of the author. The setting of the play is quite elaborate, the scenery of the second act causing especial comment,

An audience that fairly well filled the theater welcomed Mr. Hackett to the Boyd last night, and gave him a most enthusiastic reception. In a little curtain speech he voiced his appreciation of the welcome extended himself and the play, and expressed a desire to visit Omaha oftener and become better acquainted with the people. "The Fortunes of the King" will remain intil after Saturday night, with a matine

The Lighthouse by the Sea" at the Krug. "The Lighthouse by the Sea," which will finish the week at the Krug theater, opened to a fairly well filled house last night, and was given most enthusiastic greeting. This piece varies the routine of the sensational drama by providing something in the way of a novelty on the stage, a lighthouse with a blind keeper. When he is assailed by the villains who are interested encompassing the wreck of a vessel and is left bound and senseless on the floor. his granddaughter, who aids him in caring Miss Osterman and company are for the light, being dragged away, and the light being left extinguished, it seems to be all over with the ship. But just here is their wont, keep the laugh making going where the watchful Providence that looks after such things gets in its work. The lighthouse has been constructed so close to shore that a clothesline is stretched from a citff to the tower. On this line the week's wash is flying to the breezes when the storm breaks. The predicament of the vessel is discovered just in time, and the neglected little circus girl doesn't do a thing but walk the clothesline to the lightouse by the sea, which is also by the shore, and then touch off the light and save the ship and all on board, to the intense satisfaction of everybody present. turally, the ship having on board the necessary persons and papers to straighten out Chicago, which has just ended, is one of the story, the next act ends the play. the best evidences of the merits of the Quite a bit of villainy of various sorts and opera and its performances. Mrs. Rezek's Suit Against Saloon Keepers

A LARGE CROWD HEARS THE ADDRESSES

Attorneys Smyth, Gurley, Smith and Clapp Make Clever and Able Pre-

Oratory of the forceful, graceful, fervid and soul-stirring brand was on tap in Judge Kennedy's court room Thursday afternoon. The case was that of a widow Mrs. Rosa Rezek, and her children against three South Omaha saloon keepers-Bazar, Goldstrom and Klein-for $5,000 for the loss of her husband through being sold liquor, as alleged, by the defendants to such an extent that he got into a quarrel and was killed. Mrs. Rezek's attorneys were Smyth & Smith and the defendants were represented by Gurley & Woodruff and Rich & Clapp. Mrs. Rezek and her three little children were in court.

With such a setting and such masters of the forensic art and legal lore it was little wonder that a large crowd was attracted to Judge Kennedy's court, even with the opening argument in a murder trial going on in the next room.

Former Attorney General Smyth, French marshal in appearance and a veritable master of the music of a golden tongue, pleaded the cause of his clients in masterful fashion. He brought out all there was in it, and dwelt with especial strength and emphasis on the instruction of the court-given before the arguments were begun-that by the law of Nebraska every man who wants to run a saloon must enter into a bond, with sureties, to be responsible to every person who may suffer injury as the result of his selling liquor to them or theirs.

Gurley in Fine Fettle. Following Mr. Smyth, for the defendants, came W. F. Gurley, also a more than ordinarily brilliant pleader. Learned in the law and resourceful in the presentation of evidence, Mr. Gurley made a very strong invests the character with a curiously at and able plea for his clients. > Altogether, the jurors and the spectators witnessed such an afternoon of legal battling as is seldom to be enjoyed in the old court house. The corridors, as well as the court room, fairly rang with the efforts of the contestants and there was a thronging crowd present until the last word had been spoken. The jury went out to consider their verdict at 5 o'clock, with instructions that if they should agree on a verdict during the night they would seal it up and return it into court this morning In this case, as in another in the same court room recently, the bill of rights was again vindicated in Nebraska. An intelliby the ridiculous attitude in which the jury, and had the same seat in the box which the other man of his race occupied

LAND OF FLOWERS AND SUNSHINE

California Woman's Letter of Special Interest to People in Omaha. At this season of the year a letter from the land of flowers and sunshine is of special interest to our readers. The following letter from the Holden Drug Co., of Stockton, Cal., one of the largest drug houses on the Pacific Coast, is of special interest. They write: "Enclosed is a letter from one of the most prominent residents of this city. She will not allow her name to be published in the newspapers, but we can furnish it to anyone writing us."

The letter is as follows: "For some four years my daughter has had headaches, which seriously interfered with her school work. Until recently we attributed the trouble to eye strain, but happening to notice your advertisement of Hyomel, we were satisfied that her trouble came from catarrh.

"We purchased a dollar outfit, and with in tweny-four hours great relief was experienced, and the loosening of mucous matter and the reduction of throat inflammation began.. Sixty days' use of Hyomei made nearly a complete recovery, which we considered very satisfactory after nearly four years of expense and fruitless treatment by other methods, and that we feel grateful is to put it mild."

This letter shows that many cases of sickness and debility are simply caused by catarrh and that they can be cured by Hyomel. This is nature's own method of curing catarrh, medicating the air you breathe. A complete outfit, including the inhaler costs but $1, and extra bottles are only 50 cents. Ask Sherman & McConnell Drug Co., corner 16th and Dodge streets, Omaha, to show you the strong guarantee under which they sell this remarkable remedy.
