"No measure of the kind the senate has passed will bring relief to the people which has not the proper officers behind it to enforce it. But these officers, with the public sentiment which is behind the demand for relief can certainly be depended upon to enforce the law to the letter.

You will recall that the state depository law was of no effect until the present treasurer went into office and then he began to enforce it. It will be the same thing with this commission bill. The officers can enforce it if they desire, and I believe they are the kind of mer. who will do justice to the people."

HOUSE ACTS ON COMMODITY BILL Recommended for Passage After Long Debate.

Staff Correspondent.) LINCOLN, March 22 .- (Special.) - After the closing scenes of excitement over the commodity rate bill last evening the house started off peacefully this morning by adopting a resolution by Kaley of Webster felicitating and thanking the late Nebrasks commission to the World's fair for its splendid administration of affars and its economy in saving from the appropria-

Tucker of Douglas offered a petition to pay the employes for six days a week. The speaker raised the point that such a resolution had once been defeated and could not be brought up again without a two-thirds vote of the house. Speaker Rouse had a statement from the state auditor read, in which Mr. Searle handed down an oninion holding that no such resolution should be retroactive, and if so he before the date of such a resolution, McMullen of Gage sharply criticized the action of the auditor in presuming to define the course the house should pursue. "I object to a state official handing down an opinion saying what this house should or should not do.' After consuming much time the whole matter was tabled on motion of Wilson of Pawnee.

The house passed a motion by McAllister of Deuel to hold night sessions the remainder of the week and a session Saturday, by a vote of 48 to 32. Foster of Douglas offered a motion to g into committee of the whole and resume consideration of railroad bills. The speaker opposed the motion, insisting on taking up senate files on first and second reading and house rolls on third reading. The motion was lost. Bills on first reading were then taken up and H. On motion of Foster of Douglas the house then went into committee of the whole and resumed the consideration of rallroad bills. The commodity rate bill was taken up. Dodge of Douglas pleaded with the house o include his railroad commission bill in the category of railroad measures. McMullen of Gage, a friend of rate legislation, here offered an amendment to the commodity bill to cut the percentage of derease of rates from 10 to 7.

This legislature must enact a law to regulate freight rates, but the more reasonable we are the more likely we are to be fair to the corporations.'

> Wilson of Pawnee said in his judgment the argument of McMullen was proof that the house did not know enough to legislate on railroad rates.

"A stab in the dark," was the term Wilson applied to this bill. Douglas of Rock said this debate had inuced the statement that this house is made up of two classes, those who were determined to respond to the appeal of the people for railroad rate revision and another class who are bound hand and foot by the railroads. He did not believe any member was bound by a railroad. He thought the members who opposed the bill thought the members who favored it. He appealed to the members not to fear the criticisms of the newspapers which were urging the enaction of railroad legislation. Independent action was needed.

He said that might have been the reason for the publication of the story to force the Douglas delegation to stand for the bill, though of course he did not know.

The motion to appoint the committee carried almost unanimously and President Jennings appointed this committee: Dimery of Seward, Sheldon of Cass and Bresee of Sheridan. When Gibson made his motion Epperson of Clay tried to make light of the matter and moved an amendment that a committee be appointed to go to Omaha and poison the editor's dog, but Gibson was not in favor of any levity, and a number of other senators thought the paper should make good on the story or stand branded as a publisher of fabrications and falsehoods. Jones of Otoe, previous to the Gibson motion rushed out into the clear with a card for personal privilege and read the editorial in The Daily Bee calling upon the senate to clear itself of the charge or compel the newspaper to substantiate its story.
