Board of Education Hold Reception for Citizens in General.

Vormal Exercises Held in Auditorium, While New Building is Thoroughly inspected by the Interested Patrons.

The new high school building was officially opened last night, with appropriate ceremonies. Every room in the building was brilliantly lighted and it is estimated that not less than 3,500 people visited the handsome new structure during the even-The following program was carried the building and every one of the 260 seats were occupied before 8 o'clock. Several hundred were compelled to stand and it is estimated that fully 1,500 people listened to at least a portion of the program.

James H. VanDusen delivered a brief address. The crowd was so great and those near the door kept moving in and out so much that the speaker could not be heard ten feet away from the platform. A score or more prominent citizens, including members of the Board of Education, occupied seats on the platform, which was decorated with cut flowers and potted plants, ferns, Mr. VanDusen gave a brief sketch of the history of the school in South Omaha and spoke especially of the necessity for every child securing a good education. A history of the present high school building was given, but as so few could hear the remarks of the speaker the subject was not given the attention by the audience that it

During the evening those who attended the opening visited all of the rooms in the building and expressed themselves as greatly pleased with the structure.

According to a statement made by Secretary Laverty of the Board of Education the building has cost $106,385. The sum of $100,-000 was received from the sale of bonds and the premium on these bonds amounted to $417. Interest from banks on balances in the high school building fund up to January 1, 1905, amounted to $3,321. From the general building fund there was taken $1,646.

Contractor T. C. McDonald has been paid on the original contract $74,770 and for extras $2,070, making the total for Mr. Mc-Donald $76,840. The heating plant cost $16,-820 and the plumbing and spouting $5,955. For electric light wiring, lights and telephones $960 was spent. An engine cost $810 and John Latenser, architect, was paid $4,000 for plans and his services as supervis-

Some work still remains to be done about the grounds, but the Failding is practically completed. Many of those who visited the building for the first time last evening were surprised at the commodlous rooms and hallways, the excellent system of heating and ventilating and the abundance of light furnished by the hundreds of incandescent lamps. Members of the Board of Education were congratulated on all sides for securing for the city such a magnificent building.

Still Driving Piles. The driving of piles for a foundation for the new Updike elevator north of L street still continues. Wet weather has delayed the work some, but the contractors was at Laurel Hill cemetery.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH CMAHA are working as rapidly as they can. It will take 850 thirty-foot poles to sustain the weight of the elevator. Material for the structure is coming slowly and the contractors declare that just as soon as the foundation is set a large force of men will be put to work on the building.

Manager Howe Returns. MAGNIFICENT HIGH SCHOOL IS DEDICATED R. C. Howe, general manager of the Armour plant in South Omaha, returned Friday morning from Chicago. While there Mr. Howe was a witness before the special federal grand jury investigating the Beef trust. Mr. Howe stated that he had a pleasant stay in the Windy City, but as regards the federal investigation he said: "I have nothing to say on that matter." Some of the employes of the Armour company are still in Chicago, but are expected home today.

Vacant Houses Searce. Rental agencies in South Omaha declare that there are very few vacant houses at the present time. Some cheap cottages are for rent, but these are being taken up rapidly. Real estate men say that more houses are needed, and right away too. As for transfers of real estate, dealers say that there is a lively inquiry and that sales for small pieces of property are being made every day, and the possibility for some lively trading in realty is exceedingly

Both young women are graduates o Oread institute, the school of domestic science at Worcester, Mass., that is at tracting students from every part of the ountry, and during the demonstration interesting glimpses of that institution were given. Dressed in a simple white gown that contradicted all tradition regarding cook stoves and hot kitchens, Miss Hazzard stood at the dining table with a chafing dish before her and surrounded by the ingredients necessary to the preparation of the four-course luncheon which was served. The guests sat audience fashion in the dining room and parlors, and were served by a half-dozen young women. As Miss with an H before the Heyn. 318-20-2: S. 15th Hazzard gave her demonstration of the measuring, preparation, mixing and cooking of the ingredients necessary for each course she explained that there was a like preparation in progress in the kitchen beyond or > > of the demonstration the course was served. The menu included chicken pattles with cream dressing, a dainty little basket of shredded wheat biscult taking the place of the ordinary pastry cup, which Miss Hazgard explained was injurious, thus corroborating the statements of all students of hygienic cooking. Cream peas with shrimps constituted the second course, and here for a second time the shredded wheat biscuit was converted into a receptacle, a dainty little cup being made from a portion of the biscuit. Waldorf salad with triscuit and cheese constituted the third course, but in the fourth the whole wheat product seemed to be lacking, as coffee and ice cream were brought in. However, the shredded wheat was present in a most unexpected form, proving a delicious substitute for nuts frozen in the ice cream. The demonstra-

frozen in the ice cream. The demonstration was interspersed with a lecture on foodstuff in general, its preparation and the comparative values of various products. And this little talk included many surprises and contradictions of a number of time-honored theories.

Being a graduate of Oread, Miss Hazzard explained that she and Miss Barker never used a "pinch" nor a "cupful" of anything. There were little glass standard mensures, instead of luck, that she depended upon, and these never fail. And then there were a number of secrets that she told regarding imported and domestic preparations that were in favor of the domestic product. Doughnuts she regarded as positively wicked; the worst of all aids to indigestion. Her suggestion that olive oil or pure cotton seed oil be substituted for lard sounded rather extravagant until she explained how by not allowing it to get too hot and by straining if carefully after using it it might be used until it was every bit gone.
