EIGHT HOURS FOR PRINTERS

Topic Discussed at Social Session of Allied Trades Council.

SPEAKERS GENERALLY FAVOR SHORTER DAY

Samuel Rees Predicts a Fight, but Messrs. Bryan, Rosewater and Hitchcock Look for Adjustment on Peaceable Basis.

Eight hours a day for the job printers was the main subject of discussion at the social session of the Allied Trades Council at Ancient Order of United Workmen temple last night.

But one man expressed himself as not in favor of the eight-hour day. It was Samuel Rees, owner of a large job printing plant.

"I could never see the idea of cutting down production," said Mr. Rees. "I believe a man ought to work as much as he can, as many hours as he can, and if he doesn't get the benefits of his labor it is because of political conditions which allow them to go to a few men in New York City. Unions used to be for protection; they have now become aggressive. There will be a big fight on the eight-hour proposition."

Bryan and the Eight-Hour Day.

"I am interested in the labor question as a citizen of the state," said Mr. Bryan, "and I believe in the eight-hour day. I favor it because the laborer has never secured a fair share of the joint product of labor and capital. I favor it because the laborer, driven from bed to work, and from work to bed, has no time left in which to study the issues which confront the American people. All political issues must finally be decided by the people, and they must study the questions which arise from the improvement in machinery."

"Eight hours' work will accomplish as much now as did ten hours formerly, because of the improvement in machinery. Some people say let the machinery go, that men may have their hours full of labor and get the pay for it. It is not better that they should get the same pay and allow machinery to shorten the period of labor? When you say that a decrease in production is a benefit to society, you say also that man is better off for having worked more hours to make a thing. It is false position. Production should be increased to the fullest extent with the least amount of labor. I believe that the time has never yet been when the laborer has received his fair share of the fruits of his work. Shall he not strive to get it?"

"Most of the trouble between laborer and employer comes from misunderstanding. If they would get together and talk the matter over the conflict would not come. I expect to see boards of arbitration established between the printers' unions and their employers. I favor their establishment and believe they are the only means of inducing both employer and employee to look at the labor question from other than a personal standpoint. They will create public opinion and public opinion will follow justice when it finds it. Public opinion will solve the labor question."

Arbitration to Succeed Strikes.

Edward Rosewater's remarks were principally on the subject of arbitration. He said: "The greatest man is he who loves peace the most and follows peace. I want to encourage peace among working men and have done it when I have to fight over it. A short time ago passenger traffic in New York city was tied up on account of a strike, and thousands of people were greatly inconvenienced for a few days. The only way the working man had of securing concessions was to strike. This state of affairs is not long to continue. The time is gradually ripening when arbitration will take the place of conflicts and strikes."

Distribution, Not Production.

Gilbert M. Hitchcock spoke in part as follows: "With the attention of the United States in the past has been devoted to the production of wealth, the coming issues will be in regard to the distribution of wealth. At present we produce as much wealth as we need. In a few years, with improved machinery, even working only eight hours a day, we will be producing more wealth than we can consume. Business especially has great strides been made, and we can reasonably expect a reduction in working hours. With recent inventions the solution of the eight-hour question has practically come, and with it a step is taken toward the proper division of the joint product of labor and capital."

CHARITY UNDER PROTECTION

Omaha Organizations Arrange for the Regulation of Giving.

Hereafter persons soliciting aid among business men for their own needs, or representing charitable institutions in the collection of funds, will have to show the union card before being able to do any more work in the line. This follows a conference at the Commercial club between a committee, consisting of A. Hoopes, H. K. Burkett and E. V. Lewis, named for the purpose by the executive committee of the club, and of Judge Shabugh and T. F. Sturgis, representing the International Christian Institute.

When you remember the fact that the Bitters have been curing sickly people for over 50 years, you ought not hesitate any longer in giving it a fair trial. For curing Spring Fever, General Debility, Impure Blood, Headache, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Colds or La Grippe it is unequalled.

WOMAN IN CLUB AND CHARITY

The call for the biennial convention of the Iowa Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held May 10, 11 and 12 at Waterloo, will be issued this week; the program is completed and the prospects are that the meeting will surpass in interest and helpfulness any that have yet been held by the federation. The convention will be called upon to make two important changes in the constitution and by-laws. The change proposed is to constitute a board of trustees in place of the executive committee, as a check on the increase of $1 in the state dues. The present annual dues are $2 for each fifty members or less and $1 for each additional fifty members. The amendment to the by-laws calls for the enlargement of the board of directors to take the place of the executive committee and to have an executive committee, of which the state president is chairman ex-officio, act for the board in cases of emergency and to look after the more routine business when necessary. Each district chairman will also be made a vice president of the board of directors, thus insuring equal representation to all the districts. The convention proper will be preceded by an executive meeting to be held in Waterloo, May 9. The presidents of all federated clubs and all officers and chairmen of standing committees of the federation are expected to be present.

SMEDLEYS WERE IN OMAHA

Alleged Financial Prospectors in Custody at Lincoln Clerked in Boston Store in 1902.

Mrs. Edith Smedley and her husband, Scott Smedley, both of whom are now in the custody of the sheriff of Lancaster county at Lincoln on the charge of defrauding Joseph Wells of Lincoln out of $5,000, were residents of this city during 1901 and 1902. Smedley clerked during the year mentioned in the men's furnishing department of the Boston Store, while his wife worked in another part of the same store. The couple lived at the Creighton block near the opera house. So far as can be learned their lives in this city did not occasion any unusual comment among those who knew them.

OMAHA REAL ESTATE ACTIVE.

W. H. Cray, with Thomas Brennan, reports a very busy week with prospective purchasers. He says he never saw such a number of buyers in the market for all classes of real estate, especially homes and good interest paying investments. They made sales of over $2,000 and expect to close up twice the amount next week, as the buyers are getting down to business and are beginning to realize that delays are dangerous. The buyer now must look and make up his mind quick or the other fellow will get the snap. Among the sales of the week was a brick dwelling on Fortieth street for $5,000 to Mr. Ed J. Brown, who is moving from Quincy, Ill. As soon as the weather settles he looks for a large business in vacant lots and acreage.

U. A. Root of N. P. Dodge & Co.

reports the sale of Nineteenth and Webster streets to Mr. R. A. Lenhart as an investment and a lot at Sixteenth and Martha to Mr. Frank Jun. Also five acres in Ridge View to Mr. Axel Hoffman for a home.

The Charles E. Williamson company reports an active demand for Elliston Park place, the new acre tract recently platted and put on the market by that company at Thirtieth and Fort streets. There are many important developments in that vicinity, including the government's heavy expenditures on Fort Omaha for the signal corps service. All the buyers in the above addition (very aptly called Berry Gardens) have bought with the intention of building for spring and summer. The owners will also enjoy the projected boulevard improvements through the tract.
