Lord Armstrong as a boy was intended for the law, but as it happened there was a water wheel of curious construction near the office where he worked, and the man who owned it explained its mechanism to the inquisitive lad. He also explained to him an idea he had for utilizing the power of falling water in order to lift great weights.
A few brief words set young Armstrong thinking. A little later he started experimenting. And the result of it all was that there was perfected. In due course of time the enormously powerful hydraulic crane, which has rendered possible the ambitious enterprises of the modern builder.
