The first same from the 'varsity was won at Lincoln. The final score was 36 to 35.

The men from the university started off like they intended to make h a runaway and there were symptoms that the home men would not offer any serious interference to this program. The Young Men's Christian association men pulled themselves together, and were soon throwing goals as regularly as their opponents The first half closed, however, with the visitors in the lead with the score of 19 to 16. After the players warmed up to their work the play was flerce and there was something doing all the time. Fouls were numerous, the locals suffering the

Mr. Carnegie suid in part: I want to teil you gentlemen that your career is much higher than a speculative one. Stock gambling is not a business: it is a more parasite on business. If I had a son I should prefer to have him enter upon a professional career such as you choose rather than any other. I have been looking largely into small colleges of late and I have entered into the college business, as I not long ago entered into the library busi-ness. I did a rip-roaring business at the library stand, but I could look ahead and see the demand for libraries slacken. My secretary says that he is down to one library a day. I think a young man who goes to a small college receives a better education than at a larger one. I like to see men not excelling in foot ball or things pertaining to the foot, but excelling in head expansion. Sport is too generally taking the place of valuable education at the big college. follows: Away back in the middle of the last cen-tury two little girls went to school together in Oakland, Wis. They were playmates and great chums, but when both were but 7 years of age. Tut Whitney, one of the little girls, moved to Fort Atkinson, a city some distance away, and the two never saw or heard from each other until now. About two months ago Tut Whitney's little playmate, now Mrs. F. E. Campbell of Nebraska, became very anxious to locate her companion of long ago, if she should still be living. Important business con-siderations depended on it. Mrs. Campbell wrote to "Tut Whitney" and addressed the letter thus: "To the postmaster at Fort Atkinson, please see that this is delivered to the woman who fifty years ago was Tut Whitney, or to her nearest kin." Then she wrote to the postmaster a short note of explanation and mailed the two.

The postmaster knew nothing of her whereabouts or who she might be, but for two months he has been searching for her. The letter, with an explanation from place to place. Finally at Fullerton the trail began to get warm. There some one was found who had heard of Tut Whitney years ago and as her whereabouts or name since her marriage were not known, it was sug-gested that E. A. Pettijohn of Colton be notified, as he was believed to be a relative. So to Colton came the letter. E. A. Pet-tijohn proved to be the cousin of Tut Whit-ney, who for over thirty years has been Mrs. J. G. Sioan. She resided in Colton for a number of years, but is now living in Los Angeles. The letter was immediately for-warded to her in that city. During the entire search the postmaster at Fort Atkinson has not lost trace of the letter and through him it has reached "Tut Whitney" at last.
