MUSICAL REVIEW OF PRODUCTION Measures Up to the Highest Expectation of Auditors.

Last night was certainly a gala event in the history of opera in Omaha. Not since Pattl appeared at the Collseum have we had anything like it. The Auditorium was decorated in a most tasteful and harmoni ous way. Together with the huge crowd which nearly filled it, it had a metropolitan in the stage pictures.

The Metropolitan orchestra, which consists of seventy men, under the leadership sic with which Kundry allures Parsifal is in of Mr. Hertz, did remarkable work. He is liseif wonderfully elequent-or it would be a conscientious leader, with the required authority. His reading of the score was

When you remember the fact that the Bitters has been curing sickly people for over 50 years, you ought not hesitate any longer in giving it a fair trial. For curing Spring Fever, General Debility, Impure Blood, Headache, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Costiveness, Colds or La Grippe it is unequalled.

the Grail Mr. Hertz was almost the prom nent feature. Mr. Burgstaller's "Parsiful" was an in-erpretation full of beauty. His voice is a rich, even tenor, which he uses with won adequate; he never forces it. For the first act he was buoyant and impetuous, but in the end, especially in the third act, after triumphant.

For five years Mr. Burgstaller was in the chorus at Bayreuth. One of the principals being indisposed gave him his chance at an Important part. He acquitted himself so well that since that time has has steadily advanced, and has been under Madame Wagner's special guidance. She was rather angry when he joined Conried's forces in the American production of "Parsifal," but has of late granted him full forgiveness. The second act of the opera was entirely absorbed by the personality of Fremstad Her voice is a luscious mezzo-soprano with mysterious, resonant, deep tones. Her idea air which was unmistakable. The stage in the first act, where she seems to be rap had been built out to the proscenium arch idly succumbing to the horrible magic sleep. and there was ample room for perspective was most satisfying. The second act she made literally her own. She is beautiful, both in face and body. She says: "The mulif it were sung, as I feel it should be, tenderly, insidiously, amourously, not shricked thoroughly lucid. The way he has of work- or declaimed." Fremstad certainly reaches walt, ing up to a climax is inspiring. In the her ideal. It was a hattle royal between arsifal, the strong, impetuous the gorgeous, seductive woman. The transition from the lullaby to her final defeat was a triumph of art. In Chicago the audience scattered tradition to the winds and brought Fremstad out four times. Mr. Conried has changed the scenery in this act somewhat. In Payreuth the flowers are great, big, poisonous exotic-looking blooms. It is to be supposed that Wagner had a definite idea in this portrayal, Mr. Conried has softened the effect very much. The singing of the flower maidens was extremely good; the best chorus work done in the course of the opera. Some of the choruses were not good, the men especially being prone to leave the key. The Amfortas of Mr. Van Raay was a faithful interpretation. He was much handicapped in the Temple scene by being so far back on the stage. In the forte passages his voice did not carry over the He was rainer lusty in the end, where he tore off his bandages.

Mr. Blass, who is an American (together with Miss Fremstad) gave Gurnemanz a splendid portrayal. He has a beautiful, true ringing voice, which he uses with artistic effect. The role of Klingsor is small, but Mr.

Goritz did'it full justice. Teturn was a trifle uncertain in intona-

To sum it up, Mr. Confied's presentation one long to be remembered. That we n Omaha have been able to enjoy it, is due to Mr. Clement Chase's enthusing zeal, and absolute scouting of anything

SOCIETY IS OUT IN FULL FORCE One of Most Notable Events in History of City.

Not since the palmy days of the old Exposition building and Coliseum, when artists were not unusual, and yet were less so than for a few seasons past in Omaha, has anything approached the spirit with derful art. In physique he is tremendous which society entered into last evening's and his voice matches his size; it is big and performance. It was, Indeed, a gala occasion, and society redeemed itself for wasting its opportunity of two weeks ago. There have been many fashionable functhe baptism of Kundry, his whole bearing tions in the interval of years, many that was that of humility; there was nothing have attracted the smart people in all of heir finery, but none that have brought them out just as they came last night. And to the local smart set was added a large representation of Lincoln's music-loving fashionables, and others from out in the

> Handsome costumes were the rule rather than the exception, not only in the boxes, but down on the floor and throughout the gallery; in fact, it was a house that suggested "the opera."

While few entire boxes had been engaged y individuals their occupants were equivalent to parties; there were few strangers among them and after the intermission there were few empty seats, although there was a noticeable scarcity of men before the

In all probability the performance of this evening will be a more pronounced society event than that of last night.

HANDLING THE GREAT MULTITUDE

Police Have Busy Time with Throng

Twelve policemen, chaperoned by Ser geants Cook, Sigwart and Rentfrow, were required to manage that enormous crowd. on the west of the building, on the east of the building; wherever one turned right good work did those guardians of the peace do. Did a woman, in her anxlous desire to get into the Auditorium,

You suffer more than you need. Your only excuse is ignorance of the fact that carelessly step off the sidewalk and place herself directly in the way of a pair of prancing horses, it was the policeman who rescued her; did a careless driver stop too long before the awning erected for the reception of those who came in carriages, it was the policeman who en man so forget himself as to push into th throng and tread on the silk skirts of th feminine contingent, it was the policeman who told him how be ought to conduc himself.

But, after all, it was a crowd casily aken care of, and the temper of the officers was seldem ruffled by undue dis order. The hundreds who came on the ors gathered at the northwest corner the building and patiently waited unt one by one those before them passed i and they arrived at the entrance. The admittance of such numbers at a single entrance took a long time and many be gan to murmur that they would miss the opening scene. But they did not become unruly and all of them were in time to see the curtain which disclosed Gurne manz and the esquires in the forest.

Some Little Experiences. Interesting experiences were many, interesting both to those who were most pretty girl of about 19 summer: dressed in white and wearing patent leather exfords which half hid and half disclosed a neatly turned pair of silken fore the beginning of the performance and draped ankles, became tired of standing in the borders of the crowd which surrounded the single enriance provided for pedestrians, and started to search out an other way in. She watched until she thought she saw a chance and then dashed through an open space between the car riages. All would have been well had she not relaxed her vigilance and believed herself safe too soon. All uncon scious that a spirited team and a careless driver were approaching on her right, she stopped a moment at the curb to flash s smile of triumph to her companions on the left who had not tared to make the trial with her. The result might have been fatal. The strong arm of a big man snatched her from danger when the very steam from the horses' nostrils was on he neck. Did she thank him for saving he limbs and perhaps her life? No, not she She was no doubt a perfect lady, for every detail of her appearance and the expression of her face indicated it, but her feeling of gratitude was overcome by one of indignation that a man whom she did not know had dared to touch her, yes had almost carried her. "How dare you, sir," was what her eyes said, and he smiled at her kindly, as at a child who had misbehaved and knew not what it did. He received his reward a moment later, when she looked at the corded legs of the restless horses and saw them striking the fire from the pavement She smiled at him then, faintly, but he feeling was in her eyes.

Some Who Didn't Go In. Not all the people about the Auditorium were gay and happy and not all were it a hurry. There were the ones who were not so fortunate as to be able to attend the opera. In the interval between the two awnings where those from the carriages went in were half a dozen plainly dressed little girls. Their attention was not directed to the Auditorium nor to the horses, but, naturally enough, to the dresses of those entering at the awnings Silks and laces and feathers flashed before their astonished eyes and from be neath the laces peeped daintily clad feet "O, my goodness, isn't she lovely?" asked one little miss of another. "When I get big I am going to marry a brakeman so I can wear nice dresses like that. Then I'll come to the show in a notomobile and sit right on the front seat, where I can watch

Across the street, apparently not so in trepid as the youngsters, stood perhap 200 people who watched the gathering throng. For a time they probably got more enjoyment than the opera goers, for nervous with apprehension lest the curtain should rise before their arrival.

MANAGER CHASE IS THE BUSY MAN ocal Representative of Conried Wins

His Spurs for Fair. Any man in town or out of it who could have seen Manager Clement Chase yesterday evening between the hours of 4 and at the Auditorium would not have traded places with him under any circumstances for the time being. It was during this hour came in bunches, crowds, companies ar by regiments. And it seemed that every other patron and every single employe round the place had some grievance to air or some oversight to which he wished to rall the manager's attention. The most per plexing thing of all was the slender shafts of sunlight that penetrated the carefully overed windows every now and then, and looked like a good imitation of the electrical effect that transcends and illuminates the Grail. Every time the wind blew the out ide covering away from a pane of glass o some thoughtless person in the balco caised a curtain to look out six men and two women would call Mr. Chase's attenion to the matter.

"Great heavens!" he would cry. "The an't be. Why that would spoil the effect. He would thereupon dispatch two police en and a boy to find out about it.

Women with seat checks accused him eing an usher time and time again. He was looked to to referee all disputed points as to double claimants for seats and the like and it looked as though it was going to be up to him for awhile to either find som way of getting a frenzied throng of people who had paid their money in the place or there was the inevitable bluecoat, and holding back the opera. Mr. Chase kept his temper, however, and in the end all came out right and he laughed at himself for ever feeling worried.

Verdict for Defendant.

After most of plaintiff's testimony was heard in the damage sult of Minnie Danleis against Hans and Wilhelmina Boch.
Judge Redick found it necessary to take the case from the jury and to direct a verdict for the defendants on a law point raised by their attorney. Miss Daniels a year ago fell into a very deep well on premises her parents had leased from the Bochs. Two attempts were made to draw her out by means of a rope to which she clung, but both times she lost her hold and fell buck. The child, 13 years of age, was badly injured and will be practically crippied for life. She sought to recover $10,000 as damages.

In an argument on the law of the case it was practically conceded that if either of the parents had fallen into the well they could not have recovered. The court held that the child stood in her father's place under the terms of the lease and directed a verdict accordingly.
