FIRST OF CROP BULLETINS

Bulletin Reviews Weather Conditions Since Fall Months.

SOIL IS IN EXCELLENT CONDITION

Seeding is Practically Finished and Grain Looks Well, but Rain is Beginning to Be Needed.

UNIVERSITY OF NEBRASKA, LINCOLN, April 12.—(Special.)—In this, the first issue of the Weekly Climate and Crop Bulletin for 1905, a brief summary of weather and crop conditions for the past fall and winter is given to present a more complete view of the crop conditions at the opening of the season.

August, September and October.—The rainfall for August, 1904, was about normal. The soil was in good condition in most parts of the state and plowing progressed nicely.

November.—November was warm and very dry. The dry condition of the soil was rather unfavorable for winter wheat, but no serious injury resulted, and where there was no damage from the Hessian fly, the wheat was in good, thrifty condition.

December.—Warm, dry weather continued in December. While the dry condition of the soil was not the most favorable for winter wheat, little or no damage resulted.

January and February.—Warm, dry weather continued for the first week in January. On the 9th and 10th snow fell in most parts of the state, covering the ground to a depth of several inches. Low temperature and several snowstorms during the last three weeks of January and the first three weeks of February increased the depth of snow until it exceeded twenty inches in many places.

March.—March was warm, with about the normal precipitation. The weather was favorable for the advancement of spring work on the farm and the soil was in excellent condition.

April.—The first ten days in April—the first five days in April were warm, with deficient precipitation in most parts of the state.

While the temperature for the period averaged about three degrees above normal for the week ending Monday morning, and the rainfall exceeded an inch in some places.

"You see, it's just this way: About every so often he gets cross and sulky, and you can't please him with anything. I stand it as long as I can; then I say, 'Ezekiel, sit right down, take two of these Ayer's Pills, and go to bed.' You just ought to see him the next day, he is so changed, so resigned and submissive like. He will go around, hours at a time, and not say a word. Maybe 'twill be a whole month before he will have another spell. I tell you, Ayer's Pills are doing more for the relief of suffering wives than all the Carnegies and Rockefellers put together."
