LIGHT ON THE OLD SAYING.

The heart is to the human system, the center of life and energy. Perhaps it is but a natural result of this view that the instant the heart is and despondent; there is loss or irregaffected, off we go to the doctor, no matter what the fee. We suffer all sorts of pains in the stomach. We en-dure much from the torpid liver. We put aside the thought of danger to the by saying: "Oh! it's only a cough. It will go away after a time." But when the heart gives an uncommon pulsation, or when it beats too quickly, or seems to miss an occasional beat, nothing will do but an immediate examination.

The court then questioned each juror Clever specialties are introduced throughseparately and they all gave prompt answer that they considered an agreement impossible. Mr. Boaz, the sick man, looking very much fagged out and peaked, agreed with his companions. In answer to a question touching his sickness he said he feit better since getting out of the jury room. When the court offered to zend him a physician he said he would not require one, and the judge then remarked that he would let them retire for another trial, "for a while, anyway." He directed the bailiff to let the men have a breathing spell in the courthouse yard, but with the caution to keep together and not to speak to any one. When the jury had retired City Attorney Breen pleasantly remarked to Attorney Thomas, associate counsel for the plaintiff, "That sick man is the one that is for the plaintiff. You had just one." Then Mr. Breen reached for his hat, but Mr. Thomas said he could not hearken to the city attorney's judgment.

It was on the answers to be made to these questions that the lury struck its first and final disagreement, as nearly as could be judged from the talk of the men after being discharged. To have answered them in the affirmative would have put the plaintiff out of court, practically, and the five men who favored a verdict for Mr. Bemis would not agree to do this.
