Preparing for Fraternal Carnival to Be Held at Omaha May 25 and 26

THE tendency towards co-operation in all branches of human activity, whether in the solution of civic and social or other problems, or in the supplying of means of entertainment for the people, finds its latest expression in Omaha in the determination of the fraternal orders having headquarters in this city to give a carnival, which will be attended by members from at least three states and to provide interest-creating features that have never been attempted on a like scale heretofore. It is estimated that in Nebraska alone there are 1,000,000 members of fraternal orders, although many of this number are members of more than one order. In the sections of Iowa and Kansas that may be regarded as fraternally tributary to Omaha there are probably 300,000 more. This affords a convenient measure of the resources that are available to make a co-operative fraternal demonstration both practically in character and an event of widely diffused public interest. It is a very significant fact that these fraternal orders many of which are in no small measure rivaled in the endeavor to secure public favor and support should be enthusiastically working together for a common end and this with the distinct idea of making the coming carnival an annual demonstration hereafter.

Pen Picture of Cardinal Gibbons. He is an occasional visitor at the University (club—the Mecca of men of letters and other professions, where he meets on terms of friendly equality the clergyman of another faith, the lawyer, the educator, the physician, the litterateur, the artist. In these associations he displays the dignity with all the polish of a diplomat. It is not strange that he is admired by the gentler sex for these qualities, and they know and they appreciate the esteem we might call it reverence—which he feels for womanhood.

Not All a Good Thing. One fact is insisted upon by those who have the carnival in charge, and that is that this carnival will mean more to the members of fraternal orders than a period of mere entertainment. It is intended that substantial benefits will be received by everyone who attends and takes an interest in the opportunities offered. To be sure, the arrangements that will be made conform to the real benefits will come to the visitors in the most pleasant ways that can be devised, and in consequence those features that will popularize the occasion by affording entertainment of the most comforting kind will not be neglected. But the fact is not ignored that the bringing together of thousands of persons who have many interests in common, the affording of opportunities for fraternal intercourse cannot help but be of solid advantage to all. All the orders in Omaha will be represented during the carnival events of special interest to the visiting members. For example, outside organizations do not all have the resources for drills such as the Maccabees frequently give, attended as they are by striking costumes and equipment and various accessories that make these occasions especially notable. These uniform drills have become famous among the Maccabees, and besides being of an informing character, they are spectacles well worth seeing. Then there will be opportunity for the interchange of information that cannot help but be of real benefit to the visiting as well as the local members of the various orders. In no far-fetched sense the million of members will be attending a composite session, and the spirit of the occasion will be to make them men in purpose and for the benefit of all in common.

Street Parade in Prospect. There is much talk of arranging for a street parade, with as many appropriate floats as can be provided. If this can be arranged for it will be an inducement to many bands to come and participate. The time is short in which to make adequate preparation for a satisfactory street parade. But there is no doubt that this will form one of the attractions of future carnivals. "We are going to do our best," said Frank L. Weaver, "to make the first carnival one well worth attending, but it cannot be expected that we will be able to have everything as fine and in as shipshape as we will have things after we get this annual carnival properly under way. The success of the carnival depends to a large degree on the practical interest taken by the members outside of Omaha. The study and preparation for the competitive drills takes much time and close attention, and what may be called the country members will not have time to do themselves justice this year. But they will have a show, and besides we can this year give more attention to making arrangements that will meet this lack of opportunity for practice by affording the country members special opportunities for observation and accurate acquaintance with conditions to be met with in an event as pretentious as a general carnival. Notwithstanding we expect to establish one of the most important and notable annual events that are held in Omaha. We do not expect to accomplish everything we would like to do this year. Our efforts this year may, in many respects, be crude and incomplete, but this is true of all new undertakings. We will be able to make this year's event one that will long be remembered by every fraternal order man in this country, and we will be the ground for future efforts which we will all be proud of. There will be special rates given on all the railroads and we expect that the attendance will be from all parts of the valley, fraternally tributary to Omaha as a center."

An Epitaph that is a Curiosity. RIVAL to the famous Franklin epitaph, which the printer, philosopher, statesman and diplomat compared himself to a book, has been found in the epitaph of George Rutter, a watchmaker of New Hampshire, who died in the town of Newport in 1822. It reads: "Rutter lies in horizontal position, the outside case of George Rutter, whose abiding place in that line was an honor to his profession. Integrity was his mainspring, and prudence the regulator of all the actions of his life. Human, generous and liberal, his hand never stopped till he had relieved distress. He never went wrong, except when set agoing by people who did not know his key. Even then he was easily not right again. He had the art of disposing of his time so well that his hours glided by in one continual round of pleasure and delight, till an unlucky minute put an end to his existence. He departed this life September 11, 1822. His case rests and moulders and decays beneath the sod, but his good works will never die."—New York Tribune.
