POOR HOUSE HOME AT LAST

County Farm Receives Aged Pilgrims After Vain Struggle for Shelter.

LITTLE HUT SOLD BY ONE TO OTHER LOST

Old Soldier and Wife Pay Last Farthing to Slave's Widow for Home to Find Title Not Secure.

Henry Holmes was a great, big, black negro, who was a slave in Kentucky before the war. He was sold on the auction block once for $1,500 and was considered a prize by his owner. He was famed for his strength. One day he decided to be free. He crawled under a lot of gunnysacks in an empty wagon, staid there for three days, and when he emerged and got a breath of fresh air and something to eat he was in a country where no slaves were tolerated. Not long after the war began he shouldered a musket and went back to fight the men who formerly owned him. Many years ago, after the fighting was done, Henry Holmes came to Omaha, married and established a home. He "cut hams' in the old Boyd packing house for about fifteen years and built a house at Fourth and Pine streets. This "house" is one of the most curious of its kind in the city. It is constructed wholly of metal, is water tight, air tight and its nucleus is an old iron gasoline lamp pole, discarded by the city a score of years ago. The shack is in the street. In the summer it cannot be seen for sunflowers and weeds. It looks as though it simply grew around the lamp single room. Everything, from sheet iron to old tin wash boilers, was used in its construction. Here Henry and his wife lived happily. He got a small pension from the government, and when the best days of his activity were gone earned a little by doing odd jobs for people in the neighborhood. He was rich in their esteem and was a generally respected negro, noted for his prodigious size and girth, for the fact that he paid his bills and that he could "be trusted."

Little Home is Sold.

Last January Henry died of dropsy. His widow survived him. She continued to live in the shack until a short time ago, when another old soldier, a white man named Edward C. Whiting, chanced to encounter her. Whiting said he was looking for a home where he and his wife might rest until death called them, which they thought would not be long. Mrs. Henry Holmes promptly closed a deal whereby the metallic shack and its small plot of garden were transferred to Edward C. Whiting for $20, just about all the money he had Then Mrs. Henry Holmes went to the poor

Edward C. Whiting moved in-that is, he and his aged wife moved in, for they had little else to move. He also draws a small pension, $6 a month. Though he cannot capable of laboring at small jobs. So they a bed, an old cook stove set on bricks, a table and a few other of the absolutely necessary things that mark the line be- in the best of humor. tween barbarism and the rest, and moreover the "house" was warm. Mrs. Whiting's rheumatism grew worse and she Methodist Episcopal church choir on Tuescould not move hand or foot, but this did day evening, May 23. The program will not matter so much because the old man was able to get around and skirmish something to eat some way or other. But what did matter was when a representative of the city called and pulled out some inquiries. Briefly, he had to say that, although Henry Holmes had occupied the premises for a long time, a judgment had been obtained in the courts ousting him and settling that the land belongs to the city and is part of the street. Furthermore, that Holmes had been allowed to remain merely through forbearance of the shack removed so that they can improve their lots, get the street open and do little real estate business, possibly of profit to themselves.

Meets Fate with Grim Grit. Mr. Whiting, when he found that Mrs Holmes erred grievously in assuming ownership of the premises, looked at the matter philosophically. He had thought he and his wife had secured a "home" for the remainder of their days, but he is willing to go into a soldiers' home and have his wife taken care of at the poor farm or some other institution, but he thinks he ought to get his $20 back somehow. He doesn't quite understand how he can part with the money without getting something in return for it.

Claim Agent Cockrell has taken the matter up with the city government and thinks the $20 will forthcome from the treasury and that the old soldier won't lose anything by his unfortunate transaction.

Dr. Dawson was among his old friends and the welcome he received was sufficient to put him at his best. The subject of his lecture was, "Things Are Not What They Seem." He spoke of the mistaken estimate we often put on things and persons and gave two or three practical illustrations of optical illusions in confirmation of the subject of his lecture. He dwelt at length thurch life. In business life he maintained that the shams are as often on one side of can do more damage to the cause of Christianity than sixteen infidels.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Citizens Want Viaduct Built Across Tracks at Foot of N Street.

PETITION TO THAT END CIRCULATED

Movement is Taken in Interest of Property Values Which Are Said to Deserve Support.

Business men and property owners on N street are circulating a petition to be presented to the city council in regard to ondemning certain real estate in order that a viaduct may be built across the tracks yards. This petition reads:

We, the undersigned property owners and We, the undersigned property owners and taxpayers, respectfully request the city council to take the necessary legal steps to condemn the real estate necessary to construct a viaduct across the Union Pacific and Union Stock Yards company's tracks from the foot of N street to the Exchange building. It is the intention and purpose of owners of real estate on N street to erect a viaduct over the tracks as soon as the necessary right-of-way for the west approach can be secured.

Colonel C. M. Hunt is busily engaged in circulating the petition and up to last evening he had the names of seventy at tached to the petition. In connection with the petition Mr. Hunt says that since the construction of the O street viaduct the property values on N street west of Twenty-sixth street have decreased and that tenants of buildings are making arrange ments to move out on account of the fall ing off in trade. It is for the purpose of opening up another route to the stock yards and keeping up property values on Lower N street that the petition is being circulated. There is nothing in the petition to indicate what kind of a viaduct or foot bridge is to be built, or who will maintain it, should one be built. Litigation will be necessary, so it is stated, to compel the Stock Yards company to give land, full and complete examination of the affor another viaduct when the Union Pacific and the Stock Yards company only recently completed the O street steel bridge. Those who have signed the petition expect that it will be quite a difficult matter to opportune time for an examination of this secure the concessions desired from the character. > More Than Usual Interest. The encampment promises to be one more than passing interest in view of the possible contest for the position of delegate to the national encampment, which meets at Denver in August. The central point of interest, however, lies in the election of department commander, and this seems to have sifted down to two candidates, Rev. P. C. Johnson of Tecumseh and John Lett of of York county. Mr. Johnson is at present chaplain of the Nebraska penitentiary and Mr. Lett is the president of the Nebraska Association of the Veterans of Shiloh. Both men have splendid records as soldiers and are ardent

Grand Army men. There is some pretty vigorous talk of making an effort at the Grand Island encampment to change the headquarters of the department from Lincoln to the home town of whoever is elected department ommander, as prevails in other states and as applies to the Woman's Relief corps of this state, as well as with the Ladies of the Grand Army. Another feature likely to come up for animated consideration is the reduction of the per capita tax to be appraised by experts, the mortgages and paid the department headquarters. The disposition is to reduce the per capita tax to 10 cents per member. There has been a significant falling off of membership of the Grand Army during the last few years as a natural result in the increasing death rate owing to the advancing years of the old veterans.
