When Thrown from Buggy. PLATTSMOUTH, Neb., May 27.-The marriage of John Q. Pearson and Miss selected, there being no applicants for the Eliza Brookman a few days ago proves to Diace. be the culmination of a little romance which had its beginning in Nebraska. Several years ago, while Miss Brookman was visiting with relatives a few miles west of Plattsmouth, she was enjoying a drive one morning when her horse became frightened and ran away. She was thrown from the and when found soon afterwards by Mr. Pearson was lying unconscious near the roadside and bleeding profusely from a gash in her forehead. Mr. Pearson, who was traveling through the county and who had witnessed the accident from a distance, quickly placed the young woman in his own buggy and took her to the nearest farm house, where medical assistance was summoned. Miss Brookman recovered in the course of time. The friendship which sprung up from their first meeting grew into love, and now that they are happily wedded both cherish in memory this little romance in their lives.

Irrigation and Drainage Experiments. Secretary Dobson of the State Board of Irrigation, who has joint charge with the government officials of the expenditure of the $5,000 drainage and irrigation experimentation fund, said today that work is now in progress at Lexington and Imperial. At the former place efforts are being made to devise some practical method of underground drainage which will remove the alkali from the surface soil. Such experiments have been successful in Utah, and it is hoped to reclaim about 40,000 acres of fertile Platte valley land in Dawson county which has become im pregnated with alkali through tillage. The success of the plans now under consideration is expected to effect the reclamation of much other land which is now unproductive because of the presence of the hemical in the surface soil. At Imperial experiments are being conducted to determine the feasibility of irrigation through the use of a pumping plant. An effort will also be made to develop the dry farming method of soil culture. The state appropriation will not be available until July 1, but the government is already at work.
