NEBOGATOFF QUITS WITHOUT FIGHTING

Staines Japanese Flag Above Russian and Comes on Board Enemy's Ship, Where He Formally Surrenders.

UKIO, Wednesday, May II -9:30 p. m --clayed in Transmission -A number of ounded Japanese sailors have arrived at the hospital at Maidhuru navy yard. They describe the battle between the Japanese and Russian fleets as follows.

At dawn our squadron le't its renderrons and advanced through the Tsushina channel. At 2:08 in the afternoon we signted the Russian fleet. Grainally closing in we found the Kniaz Souraoff leading the line, with the Borodyno, the Alexander III. It to cought up the order named. The Nikolai I brought up the rear. Farallel to this line we observed five cruisers. After them came the special service ships and torpedo boat destroyers. We counted thirty-two Russian ships.

Sunday morning opened misty, but the weather soon cleared and the search for the remnants of the Russian fleet was begun. Five Russian ships were discovered in the vincinity of Liancourt island, and they were immediately surrounded. One, supposed to be the Izumrud, excaped at full speed. The remaining four offered no resistance and hoisted the Japanese flar over the Russian colors, apparendly offering to surrender.

Captain Yashiro, commanding the Asama, started in a small boat to ascertain the real intentions of the Russians when Admiral Nebogatoff lowered a bout and come board the Asama, where he formally frendered. The prisoners were distributed among the Japanese ships and prize rews were selected to take possession of he captured vessels. About this time we eccived a message saying that a potten of our squadron was holly engaging the emaining Russian ships. The Asama nastened to the scene of combat and found he Russian cruiser Dmitri Donskoi vigorunly resisting the Japanese attack. The Donskoi attempted to escape and we pursuely until after sundown, resuming torpedo attacks at nightfall.

When we were proceeding we were advised of the capture of Holes vensky and pur men were greatly cheered by the news. Account by Japanese Officer.

2 p. m .- A Japanese officer who has returned to Sasebo gives the following account of the sea fight off the Tsu islands: At 5:30 Saturday morning a wireless message reading, "The enemy's squadron is in sight," reached the naval base. This message was transmitted to all of our ships by the flagship, with instructions to get ready for action. Our squadron left its rendezvous and headed for the eastern channel of Tsushima. Our men seemed to be filled with new inspiration and were eager for the long delayed fight to begin. When Tsushima was sighted to the southwest the sea was rough and the torpedo boats were forced to run for the shelter of the island.

Our first and second divisions turned to be Russian's starboard, while the third sion kept in close touch with the prevaing two divisions. With the Japanese ships proceeding in this order it was 2:15 o clock when the Russians opened fire. The first two shots fell short of our line and it was some minutes later before we commenced firing. Then the battle was on, with firing from both sides. Our destroyers kept on the port side of the main squadron and in this formation we pressed the Russians against the coast of Kiushiu and they were obliged to change their course to the east. We also maneuvered our ships so as to have their bows parallel to the chief of the Russian line. So the task of our first division, which had leading, changed to the rear of the chas, of our first division, which had leading, changed to the rear of the fire on the Borodino Cour first division, which had leading changed to the rear of the chas, of our first division, which had a leading changed to the rear of the fire on the Borodino was seen to be on fire. Russians Are Surrounded.

Thus enclosed on all sides, the Russians were neipless and powerless to escape the circle. Previous instructions had been given the destroyers and torpedo boats to attack the Russian ships. Following instructions: the fifth destroyer follins advanced against a Russian ship, upon which the second division had been concentrating its fire, signaling, "We are going to give the last thrust at them."

The Russian ship continued to fight and seeing the approaching torpedo boats, directed its fire on them. Undauted, our destroyers pressed forward, the Chitose meantime continuing its fire. The torpedo foilla arrived within 300 meters of the Russian ship and the Shiranus fired the first shot. Two torpedo boats fired one each. The Shiranus received two shells, out the other boats were not damaged. The Russian ship was completely sunk. Russians Are Surrounded.

Our fleet, with the battlesuip Mikusa leading, proceeded toward the Russians in vertical line formation. The Sourand opened fire first and then suddenly turned, the Mikasa opened fire with its big guns, and thus the curtain rose on the greatises battle. The hostile fleets vradually closed in toward each other, exchanging a vigorous fire. The armoved cruiser Asama approached within 3,000 ms ers of the Russian fleet and carefully observed its action.

After a short but fiere fight the Admiral flushakoff's deck was observed to be ablaze and the ship left the line. Before 130 in the afternoon the Russian line was aliserdered and its fire sackened. The Borodino and Kamtchaka had been disabled and soon sank. The Borodino continued to fire bravely until the ship was submerged.

The Japanese fleet continued to maintain enveloping position from sundown until lawn.

Nebogatoff Surrenders.

Sunday morning opened misty, but the scale of the clarating opened to relard the restrict of the fleet, which brought success later.

GREAT CROWD ATTENDS THE CEREMONY

PORTLAND, Ore., June 1.-Amidst a scene of festivity and splendor never chiming of bells and the blaring of bands, the world in the formal opening of the o "old Oregon" by Captain Merriwether commissioned by President Jefferson, ex-

Today's celebration was participated in by the president of the United States and his personal representative, Charles W. Fairbanks; representatives of the state national congress, of the army and navy, together with the governors and staffs of the states of California, Idaho, Washington and Oregon and multitudes of people from far and near.

Everything being in readiness, at 11:45 o'clock Vice President Fairbanks and party emerged from the New York building, receiving the vice presidential salute of eighteen guns. Flanked on either side by a line of troops, the party walked to the speaker's stand. Promptly at 12 o'clock noon President H. W. Goode of the exposition arose and, gavel in hand, anounced the beginning of the ceremonies which meant the realization of Portland's dream. The announcement was received with tremendous cheering, which echoed back and forth.

Bishop Invokes God's Blessing. As the echo died away Right Rev. David H. Moore, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, stepping to the front of the platform, raised his hands and invoked the divine blessing. A perceptible stillness prevalled in the vast throng as the prayer was spoken.

The silence which followed the prayer was broken as the inspiring strains of "Imperial Oregon," a march composed by Innes and dedicated to the memory of Captains Lewis and Clark and inscribed to the people of Oregon, was played by the band. While the last notes of music were reverberated through the grounds and before the great applause which greeted its rendition of the piece had subsided. President Goode again arose to address the people. His appearance on the rostrum was the signal for renewed cheering, which continued for several minutes. Finally, in response to his appealing gestures, the president was permitted to begin his address, welcoming the people of the "old Oregon" country and the people of the United States as the guests of the exposition. Following President Goode, Governor George Chamberlain of the state of Oregon was introduced. Governor Chamberlain, in a short address, congratulated the people of the state, the city of Portland and the Lewis and Clark corporation upon the achievements of an event so notable in the history of the city and state.

Hon. Jefferson Myers, president of the Lewis and Clark Centennial comfor the state of Oregon, addressed the people on behalf of the commission. Perhaps the most enthusiastic applause which greeted any of the notable speakers was accorded Hon, George H. Williams. the mayor of the city of Portland, whose 82 years of life have not sapped the vigor of his youth nor detracted from his ability as a public speaker. At this period of the program the steadily increasing enthusiasm of the multitude found expression in a tremendous ovation to Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks, the personal representative of the president of the United States. Through his previous visits to this city, notably during the national campaign, Mr. Fairbanks became somewhat intimately known to the people of the city and state. When he was at last able to make himself heard above the noise of the greeting, he said: Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: President Roosevelt has taken a very great interest in the Lewis and Clark exposition from its inception, and it is at his request and on his behalf. I have the great honor of participating with you in these opening ceremonies.

and on his behalf. I have the great honor of participating with you in these opening ceremonies.

We commemorate an important event in American history. We pay tribute to the intrepid explorers who made their arduous expedition up the Missouri, across the Rocky mountains, down to the Pacific, and pointed the way to this land of incomparable opportunity. Their fame is secure where the deeds of men of heroic moid are forever recorded. They were the fore-runners of a high order of civilization in a territory which, prior to their venturesome enterprise, was terra incognita. It was a wilderness, inhabited by the aborigines, into which no white man had entered; it has become the sent of the empire—of vast commercial power. We look upon their work with genuine admiration and grateful appreciation.

Signal from the President. The presidential salute of twenty-one guns was the signal to the impatient throng that the moment of the opening of the exposition was at hand. On a telegraph operator seated at an instrument in the speaker's stand the eyes of the multitude were riveted, and, while the guns were still booming, the movement of his hand at the key was a sufficient indication to the watchers that President Roosevelt was being advised that all was in readiness to receive the signal from the White House which would formally open the exposition.

Then followed a wait of several minutes, marked by an impressive stillness, during which eye and ear were strained to catch
