THE TWENTIETH CENTURY FARMER
OMAHA, NEBRASKA

CURRENT LITERATURE.

R. P. Powell's latest book, "Orchard and Fruit Garden," the second in the McClure-Phillips Country Home Library, has been receiving the unstinted approval of the nursery and orchard men. The Stark Bros. Nurseries and Orchards company, one of the biggest establishments of its kind in the United States, writes to the publishers: "It strikes us as a very practical and helpful work, especially for amateurs just starting an orchard, though the most experienced orchardist will read it with profit." T. V. Munson, well known as an expert on fruit trees, writes: "I have looked it through with the greatest interest and find it a most delightfully written work—it is so clear, explicit and orderly, practical—up-to-date. The style is charming. It fills a great need for the fruit growers of every class."

Revelations of the methods of political corruption in one of our large cities now being made each day through the newspapers give special timeliness to Philip Verill's novel, "The Ultimate Passion," recently published by the Harpers. Among many "real" episodes, with which this novel bristles, there is none of more immediate import than the revelation of the real methods employed by the "ring" to insure that young legislators at Albany will not interfere with vested gas interests. Mr. Verill has related real facts concerning political methods in New York City respecting this vital matter. All his references to the question of gas are based on fact, not on fancy. The character of Eremus in the novel is a real man, and the things he tells have all happened and will happen again.

What wide-awake boys can do when thrown on their own resources is delightfully brought out in Willis Gibson's serial story, "Miles City and Return," now running in the Youth's Companion. Incidentally the reader learns a good deal about the geography, life and traffic of the upper Mississippi.

The title page of "The Girl and the Kaiser," recently issued by the Robb-Merrill company, shows the author as Pauline Bradford Mackie. This is the maiden name of Mrs. Herbert M. Hopkins, whose husband is professor of Latin in Trinity college at Hartford, Conn. Prof. Hopkins and his wife have made places for themselves among the modern novelists of America. "The Torch," Prof. Hopkins' book, published last year, attracted considerable attention as an incisive attack on commercial influences in university life. Mrs. Hopkins has quite a long list of stories to her credit. "The Washingtonians" and "The Voice in the Desert" being perhaps the most important. "The Girl and the Kaiser" is noteworthy for its intimate, friendly and unexaggerated picture of Emperor William the Sudden. For the first time in fiction we have a portrait of him, not a caricature.

A discussion of "The Future of Poland" by David Bell Macgowan is announced for the July Century. While the article was written, of course, before the czar's issue of the rescript removing many of the restrictive ordinances from which Poland has suffered, such action adds interest and value to this authoritative statement of the oppressive conditions in Poland.

"The Blue Book of Missions" for 1905, published by Funk & Wagnalls company, contains the essence of the annual reports for 1904 of a hundred or more missionary societies, with statistical tables, latest facts as to area, population, religious and missions, both Protestant and Roman Catholic, in each of the non-Christian countries of the world. It contains also a large collection of miscellaneous information carefully indexed for quick reference, and forms a handy compendium, portable and pocketable, of value to clergymen, missionaries and students.

The June number of the Four Track News sketches a vacation atmosphere calculated to hypnotize the reader. With an abundance of pictures illustrating the descriptive matter it takes a tourist to the charms of Detroit, thence to Bar Harbor and New York City and Montreal. If the tourist has time and money to satisfy his needs he may visit in Lord Fairfax's town, Winchester, Va., take a run to Cuba, and dash across the ocean to the curious old town of Seattle, England. Besides these vacation hints, there are numerous personal sketches, poems and humor, all richly embellished with illustrations.

The high art that is being put into souvenir postal cards nowadays is most perfectly exemplified by some of the pictorial products of Raphael Truck & Sons Co. of New York. The postal card is being made educational as well as artistic and in these series one can travel around the world with graphic portrayals of all the most interesting sights and scenes sought after by round-the-world tourists.

Annie Faxon Call's "Power Through Repose" has brought relief to so many nervous men and women that a new book by the author is sure to be eagerly welcomed. "The Freedom of Life" is the title selected by Miss Call for what may be

EXTRA SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Owing to the urgent request of the people of Omaha we have managed to secure a continuance of the lectures by Miss Sarah Elizabeth Craig of Boston. These lectures are of the very highest order and are entirely free. The management of the Direct Action Gas Range Company were both to permit Miss Craig to stay, but after repeated efforts we finally secured her services for the rest of the week. She will continue to give these lectures every morning at 10:30 and every afternoon at 2:00 and on Saturdays in the afternoon at 2:30 and in the evening at 7:30, no morning lecture. All her cooking is done on the Direct Action Gas Range, of which we are the sole agents. These ranges are sold on the Easy Payment Plan—50 cents per week for the smaller size; $1.00 per week for the larger size.

termed "the gospel of orderly living." In her new book she attempts to give a remedy for the distressing waste of nervous force which attends our daily work. She shows how we may be spared the pain and annoyance of doing right in the wrong way. Several of the chapters in the book appeared originally in Leslie's Monthly Magazine. Miss Call resides near Boston. Her previous books along the same line, "Power Through Repose" and "As a Matter of Course," have had a large sale. Little, Brown & Co. are her publishers.
