Governor Cummins Delivers the Principal Address, Paying Tribute to Those Who Have Made the School What It Is.

No more fitting vehicle could have been offered as a demonstration of the progress training of the young bereft of the senses of hearing and speech than the graduating exercises of the Iowa School for the Deaf. held last night in conjunction with the celebration of the semf-centennial annivermary of the founding of the institution That children lacking the sense of speech as well as that of hearing could be taught to articulate was a revelation to hundreds who had not before had the pleasure of witnessing the commencement exercises of this state institution.

The joint event, together with the fact that lowa's elequent governor, Hon. A. B. Cummins, was to deliver the address of the evening, attraced an audience which not only filled the large auditorium of the high the shock of the accident to her son. graduates. The principal feature of the program, however, was the address of Governor Cummins, who was accorded an ovation by the large audience. Governor Cummins is known as one of the most eloquent speakers in the state and his effort last night, while somewhat brief, was no exception to the rule. He said in part: Governor Cummins said in part: Governor Cummins said in part:

Over many of the institutions founded by the state of lowa for the betterment and protection of its people the half-century has already passed. We have from time to time during the last few years celebrated with fitting ceremonies and grateful hearts the flight of fifty happy and prosperous years which mark the beginning and growth of many noble undertakings in the building of a state. I have been a witness to some and a participant in others, but I remember none more gratifying than the occasion in which we are now engaged.

It is but common justice to pause a moment, as we survey the splendor of present achievements and render a well deserved tribute to the men and women of fifty years ago-men and women who.

served tribute to the men and women of fifty years ago—men and women who, though inspired with the unlimited hope, though inspired with the unlimited hope, and filled with the unbounded enthusiasm of the pioneer period were yet beset by the hard conditions of an uninhabited country and the poverty, which the frontier always creates. It is easy for us, in the midst of the ease which wealth carries in its train. the ease which wealth carries in its train, with the flood of knowledge which time has poured upon us, with the experience through which we have begun to understand how essential it is for the state to give to those upon whom misfortune has laid its heavy hand, the training which opens to them new fields of usefulness and new lives of pleasure. But it was not so easy for those who founded the school whose fiftleth anniversary we are now commemorating to begin the work of raising this altar to humanity and to dedicate it to the helpless children of a long and unknown future.

the helpless children of a long and unknown future.

Knowing something of the history of the institution whose graduates we have now about us, I can well congratulate the people of the state upon its management from its origin to the present moment. Those who have led it have done their work with conspicuous fidelity. I must especially felicitate the superintendent who for many years has been the dominating mind of the school. He has served his state with honor in other fields of labor, but the brightest jewel in the crown of his life will memorialize his work in this institution. He has made the state and all its people his debtor throughout the far reaches of time and I doubt not they will be swift to recognize the obligation.

City Hall Bond Sale is Again Delayed Springs, Mo. Miss Laraus Williams of Through Litigation.

BUYERS REFUSE TO ADVANCE THE CASH

Hayes & Sons Decline to Advance Anything on the Purchase Price Until Validity is Fully Established.

There is another hitch in the city hall bond proposition. W. J. Hayes & Sons. the Cleveland bankers who purchased the bonds, have notified Mayor Koutsky that they will not take the bonds until the itigation is over. When the temporary injunction was dissolved by Judge Day the council offered the bonds for sale and Hayes & Sons bid a premium of $559. The purchase was subject to the opinion of the ttorneys for the bankers. At the time the temporary injunction was dissolved City Attorney Lambert announced that the council was at liberty to go ahead and offer bonds for sale. It appears that the final disposition of the case is not to come up until the September term of court. When a letter was received by the mayor from Hayes & Sons stating that the payment of the purchase price would be deferred until all litigation was over, steps were taken at once to have the case called as soon as possible. A. H. Murdock, who was employed to assist the city attorney in looking after the city's interests in the onso, stated Tuesday afternoon that he had filed a motion in the district court to have this bond case advanced in order that the matter might be disposed of as soon as possible. legal department had found a flaw in the charter in relation to the paving of certain streets. Whether this is true or not could not be verified as the city officials are not talking on the subject. It is known, however, that P. A. Barrett, an agent in the employ of the legal department, went to Lincoln yesterday. It is presumed that Barrett's mission is to secure a certified copy of the South Omaha charter, or else to look up some other matters pertaining to the paving questions, There is a good deal of talk about the repaying of Twenty-fourth street. Some of the property owners on the street insist that the city at large should pay the cost of repaying as the packing house teams and other heavy hauling vehicles are responsible for the condition of the pavement. On the other hand some property owners think that the street should be paved under the same plan as adopted when Railroad avenue was paved. It looks as if no matter what action the council takes remonstrances will be filed.
