Abolition of the modern Fourth of July celebration-or, rather, the extraction from it of the large possibilities for mischief. maiming and murder-is a demand of the public which seems close to accomplishment at present. Those who fear the day will be lost to glory and to patriotism when the sting is extracted and a sane celebration enforced have only to talk with the old-timers of their acquaintance to realize that the real celebrations of the day and the giving to if of clean honor and boisterously unrestrained or angelically uplifting enjoyment were held in what seem like ages ago to the present genera-
