Some Tersely Told Tales Both Grim and Gay

Cost and Time of Trip to a Star. I suppose a railway to have been built between the earth and the fixed star, Centauri, said the lecturer. "By a consideration of this railway's workings we can get some idea of the enormous distance that intervenes between Centauri and us. "Suppose that I should decide to take a trip on this new aerial line to the fixed star. I ask the ticket agent what the fare is, and he answers: "The fare is very low, sir. It is only 1 cent each 100 miles. "And what, at that rate, will the through ticket one way cost? I ask. "It will cost just $2,500,000,000," he answers. "I pay for my ticket and board the train. We set off at a tremendous rate. "How fast, I ask the brakeman, are we going? "Sixty miles an hour, sir," says he, "and it's a through train. There are no stoppages. "Well, soon be there, then, won't we? I resume. "We'll make good time, sir," says the brakeman. "And when will we arrive? "In just 48,000,000 years,"—Philadelphia Bulletin.

intended to prove by him that my witness had lied. "Buffalo" took the stand and swore that while he had never seen or heard of the witness before, and knew nothing at all about the crime committed, he had had a great deal of experience with men and could tell pretty certain when they were lying. Then he proceeded to tell how men acted when they were lying, and gave the expert opinion that my witness had sworn to lie from the word go. I protested against such performances, but Sutton made the judge believe he had as much right to introduce an expert on liars as he would have to introduce an expert on medicine or any other science, and the result was the thief was dismissed from custody. Sound Reasoning. "Sambo," said the owner of a country place to his gardener, "concerning that tree I wanted you to cut down, my wife thinks it had better be allowed to stand." "Well, ah think it ought ter come down, Massa Brown," was the reply. "What are your reasons for thinking so, Sambo? "Well, sir, de first reason am dat de tree done keep de light off de greenhouse; de second reason am dat it's gettin' old; de de third reason am dat I cut it down last night."—Harper's Weekly.

I don't wish to be offensive to you. It is your confounded firm I am complaining of. If you are Jones, I say d— Smith. If you are Smith, I say d— Jones, don't mean to be personal at all.—New York Times. Got the Better of Butler. During his boyhood Benjamin F. Butler was a frequent visitor in the town of Nottingham, N. H., where an uncle resided, and among the many stories related of him is one concerning his examination of Pat Murphy, a local character. Tim Dolan had been accused of selling liquor, and the prosecution summoned Pat to testify in the case. Now Pat was a job tender, and Butler endeavored to make him admit that he had delivered liquor to the defendant. Butler asked: "Did you ever take any freight from the railroad office and deliver to Tim Dolan?" "Yes, sir." "Part of this freight was a barrel, wasn't it?" "Yes, sir." "Pat, what was in that barrel?" "I don't know, sir." "Don't know! Wasn't the barrel marked?" "Yes, sir." "Then, how dare you tell the court that you don't know what was in it?" "Because, sir, the barrel was marked Tim Dolan on one end and Bourne whiskey on the other. How the devil did I know which was in it?"—Boston Herald.

Interpreter answered: "His excellency devotes himself to poetical enigmas." This is the Browning, recognizing fully the comic element in the situation, extended his hand most cordially, saying: "His excellency is thrice welcomed; he is a brother indeed!" A Joke in Court. "While in England recently," says "Abe" Hummel, "I called on an eminent barrister with whom I was going to the races at Newmarket. He asked me to step over to the law courts while he made a motion in the trial of a client accused of rather large swindling operations. I consented, provided I should not have to listen to any of the atrocious puns that are alleged to pass between the learned judges and counsel in English procedure. "Nonsense," said my friend. "We never do anything of the sort. It's mere newspaper talk. "To my surprise, and obviously to that of my friend as well, his client was brought into court handcuffed to another man and arraigned on a criminal charge. At the proper time the judge said: "I am astonished that such a prepossessing prisoner should be brought before me on a charge like this. He looks like a prosperous, polished, well-groomed man of the world. "He should present a neat appearance, my lord," replied the counsel. He was brought into court ironed."—New York Times. Back to Boyhood. Travers had been absent from his club for two days. When at last he appeared one evening with a light of victory in his face, his fellow members crowded round him and demanded to know why and where he had been. "I have been humiliated, deeply, painfully humiliated," he said. "Let's hear about it," came in quick chorus. "Well, the other afternoon I was walking up King street, when I found a group of boys spinning tops on the sidewalk—rather trying to spin tops. They were very small boys. "Say, mister," said one of them to me, 'can you spin a top?' "Indeed I can," I said. "Show us how," they all demanded. "I used to be a first-class top spinner twenty years ago, so I pulled off my gloves and took the top and string. They my troubles began. First I could not wind the string. The string kept slipping down. Then when I did get it wound, the string flew rather trying to spin tops. They were very small boys. "Ho," said one boy. "Mike can do better 'you, and he ain't only six." "I put on my gloves and came hastily away, but—" and Travers fumbled in his pocket and produced a top and string—"I

I breathed again. "And what have you done with the cup?" "Placed it!" "How much for? How much for?" "Let me think. I had a couple of cabs and the postage was a tanner, with another twopenny for registration. Yes, it cost me exactly five-and-eight." "It cost you? But what did you get for it, Raffles?" "Nothing, my boy." "Sent it to the queen?" "Not a crimson cent." "I am not surprised. I never thought it had a market value. I told you so in the beginning," I said irritably. "But what on earth have you done with the thing?" "You haven't!" bargain. Do a thing properly if you do it at all." "But why on earth," I groaned, "do such a thing at all?" "My dear Bunny, we have been resigned over for over sixty years by infinitely the finest monarch the world has ever seen. The world is taking the present opportunity of signifying the fact for all it is worth. Every nation is laying of its best at her royal feet, every class in the community is doing its little level—except ours. All I have done is to remove one reproach from our fraternity." At this I came round, was infected with his spirits, called him the sportsman he always was and would be, and shook his dare-devil hand in mine, but at the same time I still had my qualms. "Supposing they trace it to us?" said I. "There's not much to catch hold of in a biscuit box by Huntley & Palmer," replied Raffles; "that was why I sent you for one. And I didn't write a word upon a sheet of paper which could possibly be traced. I simply printed two or three on a virginal post card—another helpfully to the bad—which might have been bought at any post-office in the kingdom. No, old chap, the G. P. O. was the one real danger; there was one detective I spotted for myself, and the sight of him has left me with a thirst. Whisky and Sullivan for two, Bunny, if you please." Raffles was soon clinking his glass against mine. "The queen," said he. "God bless her!" (End of the Eighth Story.)

RISING BREAST. And many other painful and serious ailments from which most mothers suffer, can be avoided by the use of "Mother's Friend." This great remedy is a God-send to women, carrying them through their most critical ordeal with safety and no pain. No woman who uses "Mother's Friend" need fear the suffering and danger incident to birth; for it robs the ordeal of its horror and insures safety to life of mother and child, and leaves her in a condition more favorable to speedy recovery. The child is also healthy, strong and good natured. Our book "Motherhood" is worth its weight in gold to every woman, and will be sent free in plain envelope by addressing application to Bradford Regulator Co. Atlanta, Ga.

STORZ BREWING CO AGAIN TO THE FRONT. WE have just completed installing a copper pipe line direct from the great vats in our storage cellars to the Bottling Department. This is a new innovation, our brewery being the only one in Omaha or the west equipped in this manner. With this modern arrangement we fill bottles with beer drawn direct from the hermetically sealed vats in our storage cellars for what suits being especially popular.
