BONAPARTE AND POLITICS

Secretary of Navy Talks on Parity in Administration of Government. CIVIL SERVICE REFORM NOT IDLE DREAM

Duty of People to Pay More Attention to Political Affairs and Place Honest Men in Office.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 10.—At the convention of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor this afternoon the principal address was delivered by Charles J. Bonaparte, secretary of the navy.

Secretary Bonaparte said in part: "I have known a story was told of a very low class politician who, after the city, now dead, who on his return from a tour of inspection in the city as a newspaper reporter, who remarked to him in a moment: 'Mr. A., I do not understand you at all. You are talking about a man who you can be so great an adept in such a practical, working career as a witness and a blushing politician.'"

Of late years the American people have shown a disposition sufficiently plain to be widely recognized, and that is, a disposition to elect to office men of high principle. So many of our citizens are beginning to understand the meaning of what my late fellow townsmen would call "reform."

In truth, the making up of politics and the doing of it is a very unwholesome and unprofitable business. It is a business that has a few words as to the real nature, causes and consequences of the phenomenon may be said to have no history.

The closing sessions of the Christian Endeavor convention was held tonight in Armory hall, under the leadership of the treasurer, William Shaw of Boston.

Evils Not Easily Corrected. As always happens, it proved easier to recognize evil than to discover remedies. In the case of the Christian Endeavor convention, our search for the latter was not so easy.

The underlying evil in the administration of our public offices is too often held by dishonest men, too often gained by dishonest means, and too often used for dishonest purposes.

Public office reform, in fact, applies a caustic to the very ulcer in our politics, in the application of which the commonest sense of the choice of public servants.
