

GOOD OLD TIMES IN MONTANA

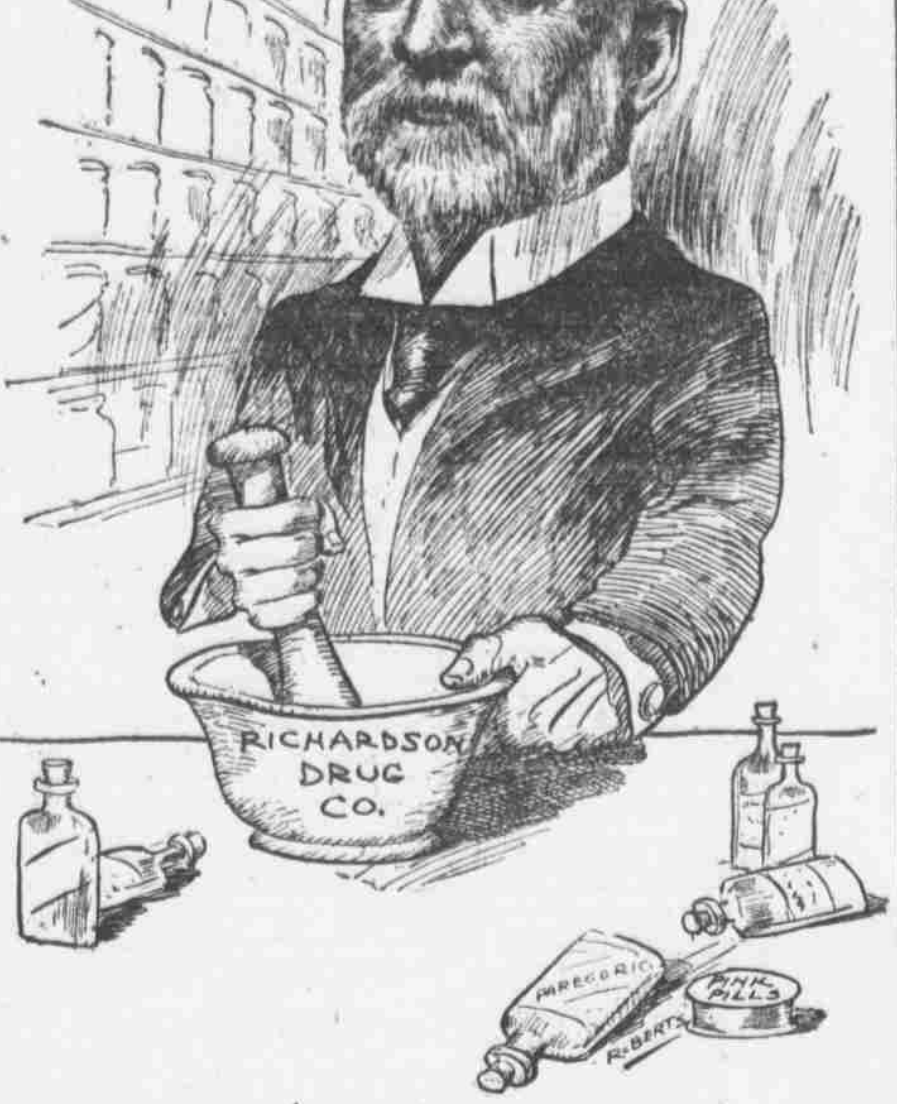

Early Days Recalled by the Death of Pioneer Lawyer.

FIRST TRIAL AND SUBSEQUENT EVENTS

Harry Haskell Tells of Some Cases in Which the Late Senator Sanders Was Personally Interested in the 90's.

The death of former Senator Wilbur F. Sanders at Helena, Mont., last week awakens recollections of early life in Montana...

OMAHA MEN AND THEIR HOBBIES

CHARLES F. WELLER—Mixing Medicine.

The senate when Montana was made a state and served four years. In 1896 he proved his moral courage by standing for sound money in a silver country.

Mr. Haskell has the honor of having printed the first paper got out in Montana, the Virginia City Post, in 1863. It was about this time that the trial and hanging of Ives took place at Nevada City, about two miles from Virginia City.

"As nearly as I can remember, Ives killed a Dutchman because the latter resisted the dispossession of a pair of mules," says Mr. Haskell. "I know that there was a mighty lively time over the way in which the prisoner should be tried."

"Finally Slade's lawlessness got too bad to stand and he was sentenced to death for inciting others to rebellion," says the story goes. He refused to pay a $400 fine, I believe. Sanders was a friend of Slade's, but I suppose he took the same fearless part in this affair as in the others.

AFFAIRS AT SOUTH OMAHA

Likelihood that Paving of Twenty-Fourth Will Be Prevented.

REMONSTRANCE SEEMS TO BE ALL RIGHT

Intimation that There is More Behind the Paving Fight Than Appears on the Surface at Present.

City Engineer Beal and the city attorney are looking over the remonstrance against the paving of Twenty-fourth street. There seems to be some hope among city officials that the remonstrance will not pan out strong enough to prevent the letting of a contract for the paving.

Shortly after the remonstrance now on record be found sufficient there is no hope for the paving of the street until the law is changed.

The existing law holds that the property owners on Twenty-fourth street must pay three-fifths of the cost and the city two-fifths. With the city paying for the paving at intersections the cost to abutting property owners would be 40 per cent of the total.

It looks as if there was really more behind this paving fight than is shown on the surface. There seems to be a fight on between paving brick contractors, and then there is the asphalt and cement work.

It has been suggested that business men together endeavor to have the question of asphalt or brick settled so that the street may be paved. As the roadway now lays it is a disgrace to a big packing center like South Omaha.
