Anderson of Douglas county, and is an act to provide for the protection of trade marks, labels and forms of advertising, and it was especially desired enacted by the labor unions. The bill provides that a fee of $2 shall be paid to the secretary of state upon the filing of a trade mark, and the statute does not require the secretary to turn the money over to the treasurer, and as the constitution prohibits him from keeping it, the secretary is in a quandary.

WORRALL GIVES MORE NAMES

Designates Dealers, Who Refused to Sell Grain to His Company. SAYS H. G. MILLER BROUGHT THIS ABOUT Independent Grain Dealer in His Fight with Elevators insists on Having Questions Written.

Thomas D. Worrall, president of the Worrall Grain company, unfolded part of his tale of what the Nebraska Grain Dealers' association did to him before Notary Charles G. Pearsall in room 630, Bee building, yesterday afternoon. Mr. Worrall is plaintiff in a suit for $125,000 damages against members of the association, whom he accuses of breaking the anti-trust laws of the state. He did not finish his deposition and will begin talking again at 9 o'clock this morning.

Worrall told him I was inclined to take objection from anybody and everybody and wanted to know if I was. I told him that while we didn't want to do anything not right that in the last year there had sprung up in Nebraska a large number of farmers' elevators, there being from thirty to thirty-five of them in the state, and with the encouragement of the Omaha Grain exchange I didn't see how we could keep from it. He said: 'I am glad to have this frank and open conversation with you. I had intended giving you some business, but this being true I will not.' At Kearney I met George West of Goshornburg. He told me that he had been at the Kearney meeting and Secretary Miller told them and advised them they must not do business with the Worrall Grain company.

Worrall said that Secretary Miller, in July, 1934, told it upon himself to dictate and control the policy of every man connected with the grain business in Nebraska; that Miller came to him repeatedly and told him what he 'could and would' do if the company kept on doing business with irregular dealers. He said the secretary threatened to 'bulletin' the company if it did not cease such transactions, and that he witness told the secretary he could not expect to control the business at both the buying and selling ends, and pointed out to him that the establishment of the Omaha Grain exchange had altered conditions and put the farmers in a position to add freight rates to the Omaha questions and know whether the prices offered at their stations were right or not.

Worrall testified in response to questions by Attorney Ed P. Smith that he had been in Lincoln and is a stockholder and president of the Worrall Grain company, with offices in Omaha. He has been in the grain business altogether twenty-five years. In 1909 he helped organize the Nebraska Elevator company, which remained with it as secretary until 1924. The Worrall Grain company was organized May 21, 1924. It owns an elevator in Council Bluffs, but has not owned nor operated any other grain elevator. The company has never been engaged in raising grain for market nor at any time engaged in operating an elevator or scoop-shovel house in Nebraska. The company has not bought grain for shipment and loaded into cars. Grain has been bought from elevator men and other dealers in Iowa and Nebraska. The grain was raised in Omaha, Lincoln, Kansas City, Chicago, Minneapolis, Davenport and other cities outside of Nebraska. About 90 per cent of the grain bought was purchased from within the state and about 56 per cent of this was sold to points outside Nebraska. The stockholders in the Worrall Grain company are T. D. Worrall, Charles T. Peavey and O. H. Eggleston. The authorized capital stock is $50,000, of which Worrall owns $12,490 in shares of $100 each. Of $20,000 of stock, or 20 shares, have been issued. Peavey has seventy-five shares and is the bookkeeper of the concern. Eggleston is a grain dealer at Murdock, Neb., and owns one share.

Worrall testified he paid $7,500 cash and a personal promissory note for $5,000 for the stock in the company in payment for his stock. He put up stock of the company as collateral, $7,500 worth. Subsequently the note he and Peavey gave were paid. Worrall sold his interest in the Nebraska Grain company and took up his note in the latter part of 1934.

Worrall Gives Names. 'Do you know of anyone out in the state who refused to sell or consign you any grain on commission in June, 1934, because you were 'irregular'?' asked Attorney Smith. 'Only what they told me,' was the reply. 'Will you give us the names of persons refusing on these grounds?' 'Mr. Conrad of Wood River told me that he had been to a meeting at Kearney called by Horace G. Miller, secretary of the Nebraska Grain Dealers' association. Mr.
