RAILROADS ALSO ACCUSED

Transportation Lines, Worrall Says, Join with Elevators Against Him.

REFUSE TO GRANT SITES FOR BUILDERS

Little Better, Though, Since Suit Started—Worrall Openly Charges that Conspiracy Has Been Concocted.

Having charged deliberate conspiracy on the part of the Nebraska Grain Dealers' association to freeze out the Worrall Grain company and the collusion of the railroads in refusing to grant elevator sites to this company, T. D. Worrall Friday morning continued his testimony before Notary Pearlall in his endeavor to prove his charge of combination in restraint of trade against the line elevator firms of Nebraska.

The further taking of testimony was adjourned Friday afternoon until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Mr. Worrall took up his deposition again Friday morning under the interrogation of his attorney, F. S. Howell. He testified there were about 1,500 purchasing stations in Nebraska that buy from farmers direct and that the last report from the secretary of the Grain Dealers' association gave the members of "regulars" as only 70. That there are about 400 dealers, owners and operators of elevators not belonging to the association, but work with the latter and are members to all intents and purposes, except they do not pay dues.

Attitude Toward Him.

Describing the attitude of the association toward the Worrall Grain company and independent grain dealers, witness said:

"Members of the association are very anxious and bend their energies to bring about a condition like this: That the prices paid the farmer for grain at all stations where there is an elevator shall be the same as the surrounding stations, barring the possible difference in freight rates to the markets. This is done for the purpose of preventing friction and to prevent one point from paying more than another point, thereby causing each one to get the grain that belongs to that point, and to prevent any friction in prices that would necessitate a misunderstanding between dealers in regard to prices that should be paid.

"Since the filing of the suit by the Worrall Grain company against the Omaha Elevator company and others on June 17, 1905, Secretary H. G. Miller told me in the presence of J. E. Van Dorn that he didn't know any difference between a regular and irregular dealer. Prior to that time the difference was this: That no regular dealer should recognize an irregular dealer on the broad and humane principle of doing business and living and let live, but if he could do business with the irregular and make the irregular lose money in the business transactions they had together, he was at liberty to do all the business with him that he possibly could. If it couldn't be done in this way he was absolutely to refrain from having any business dealings of any kind, but was to use his best endeavor to cause him to lose all the money he possibly could, while engaged in this business, so as to get him out.

Position of the Railroads.

"The attitude of the Union Pacific has been not to give any sites for farmers' associations or independent dealers unless a combination of circumstances brought about a condition whereby they were compelled to give it, and in some instances after an action had been begun to compel them to do so. That has been the attitude of the Northwestern, also. The Rock Island has positively refused and is refusing yet to grant these concessions. About three years ago the R. & M. took the same attitude, but since the management has changed, or since the Hill interests came into control, the Burlington has been more liberal and is giving more show as the days come and go, and is not refusing sites to farmers' organizations and independents, like they did a year ago."

Witness told how the secretary of the Nebraska Grain Dealers' association instructed all members to notify him whenever a car was loaded at his station by a former irregular shipper, giving number of car, destination and consignee. He would then try to have the consignee refuse to handle, or if a first car, to have it handled at a loss to the shipper. If the consignee did not meet the demands he would be "bulletined" to members of the association and the latter cautioned not to have any business dealings with him further. At every district and annual meeting names of the rebellious dealers would be read, so as to keep the bars up.

Life and Death Matter.

Said Worrall: "In purchasing grain from dealers in Nebraska that were members of the association, we were told they couldn't do business with us because they had heard we had seen fit to handle grain from farmers' elevator organizations, and if that was to be our attitude they would refrain from doing business with us, for they considered this a life and death matter—a matter they would have to fight to the bitter end, because if these farmers' organizations erected elevators and got into the grain business at as many as fifty or seventy-five points in the state, located at the right places, it would curtail their profits, and thereby their property would depreciate in value. That is the very essential thing should control this business at the terminal end as well as the buying in the country. So they at once concluded this must be done, and they would have to pursue the same course toward the receiver that they did to the farmers' elevator companies in the country and would have to bar him out of the markets in Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, or while they couldn't exactly bar him out, fix it so he would not be able to receive the true worth and value of what they had to sell."

Worrall said that before his company came under the ban of the association he received car bids generally from the trade in St. Louis, Chicago and other cities, but they have all ceased except one, the Atchison Live Stock company at Atchison, Kan.

He said that customers of the firm gave as an excuse for not doing business that the Worrall company was under the ban of the association, which is the "tightest organization or association in Nebraska or any state in the union," and they must be very careful how they did business and the amount. He defined a "line house" as one that operated more than five elevators. He said "things had loosened up quite a good deal," and a better outlet furnished for grain from the Worrall company since the suit was started. Representatives of the Rock Island and Great Western roads had approached him on the subject since the suit was begun.

"Did any of those who refused to deal with you give any other reason for so refusing except that you were independent?" was asked.

"No, sir," responded Worrall, emphatically.

"In April, 1905, the president of the Nebraska Grain Dealers' association, at that time Mr. Bell of David City, a good friend of mine, a man I owe more to for my partial success in the grain business than any other individual in the state, came to me and asked me to go with him into a dark cellar or into a basement, and said that he wanted to have a heart-to-heart talk with me. He told me what was being done and advised me not to go to the annual meeting of the association along with other receivers, as there were quite a number of them, because, he said, 'If you go you are going to be humiliated, and my advice to you is to stay away.' He told me they had passed the word along the line and the word they had passed would be injurious to me. He thought I had better join and become a member of the association, so as to renege myself. I positively refused. He says: 'We have come to the parting of the ways; I've got to do one thing or the other. I've got to refrain from doing business with you or get out of the Grain Dealers' association.' From that time on the present we have not done one penny's worth of business with him."

H. L. Alden of Raymond told me that if he had got information over the phone from Omaha that I was bidding farmers in advance he would not have shipped me two cars of corn."

The witness said a dozen or fifteen forged or counterfeit letters, represented to have been sent out by his company to the trade, were sent in to him by persons receiving them. This forgery was a copy of a circular letter sent out by the Worrall Grain company describing plans for the future and getting grain direct from the producers, so as to circumvent the association. Worrall sent none of his letters to members of the association, but received the number he stated of the counterfeits back from members.

TRIES TO BLUFF PIERSON

Man Arrested for Illegal Fishing Draws Gun on Deputy Fish Commissioner.

Hans Christensen, who was fined $25 and costs by Judge Day for illegal fishing around Out-Of lake when he pleaded guilty, made an attempt to bluff off Deputy Fish Commissioner Pierson with a shotgun when the latter attempted to arrest him. Pierson found Christensen sitting in one of the boats which the recent rise of the river has left around the lake and when he started for Christensen to arrest him the latter pulled a shotgun and tried to bluff him off, but the warden was not to be bluffed. When arrested Christensen had disposed of his game fish and had nothing left but a boatload of gear which he had sorted out. These gear evidently ran in the lake during the rise.
