Modern Business Colleges Keeping

Right Up with the Demand by Employing Competent

Teachers. With the marvelous development of modern business methods the profession of stenography has taken rank with the foremost of business sciences. It has also developed a class of professional workers of the highest order of intelligence, commanding the highest salaries, and has had much to do with the later perfection of business transactions. The knowledge of shorthand has now become an absolute essential in the profession of stenography, and a girl or man desiring a lucrative and dignified position makes no mistake in securing a knowledge of phonography or phonetic writing. The age is a fast one. The most rapid worker is the best paid one, providing the rapidity of work is accompanied with accuracy. While it is a trite and possibly true saying that "The woods are full of stenographers." there are many so-called stenographers that do not deserve the name, and are incapable of doing what business men want done. The business man as a rule does not wish to do much teaching, and very little waiting. What he desires in his stenographer is accuracy, rapidity and neatness, and these are the essential principles that go to make up the true stenographer. Deficient in any of these particulars, the stenographer is useless to his or her employer. Inefficiency

Accuracy Must Go with Ability. Ability to write shorthand with facility and accuracy can be acquired only after the most painstaking effort. Spelling, capttalization and punctuation are very important factors and count for much. The stenographer should be able to execute a neat, plan, legible style of business writing and correspondence. Business men are typewriting higher and higher, and the must be able to meet these demands if he or she expects to hold a first class position, or any position for any length of time.
