It happened that a good Presbyterian was in charge of Indian affairs at Washington. He became greatly shocked over reports he heard in regard to the morality of the Indians. Later he sent an order upon the subject to Major Mc-Gillicuddy, who was then agent at Pine Ridge. The agent called the braves into council and read the order from Washington to them. "You see," said Major McGillicuddy, "it means this, someone has been telling at Washington that some of
