Tennis Tournament Helps Some and the Boat Club Dances Make a Place for Many Others Seeking Amusement.

To Certain Summer Girls. O fair Belinda, do not pine, O Una, don't despair, Be patient, gentle Caroline, Cheer up, Angelle Claire.

Do not cast down, superb Elaine, Be brave, alluring Nell, Don't wring your hands, Matilda Jane, Be calm, sweet Isabel.

Do not fancy hope is dead, Be game, and laugh at fate, Bear this in mind, they also wed, Who only wait and wait.

Maxims of Methuselah. To Lo, I have watched the rivalry of maidens at the summer hotel, and the seers have regarded their strife. Yet could I not judge a damsel's popularity by the flowers she received, for verily, it is her mother who smelteth them, and the old man footheth the bills.

If she leadeth thee on to talk of thyself, she hath one of two motives without admiration or contempt. Judge not a woman's beauty by the back of her head, lest the wise man scorn thee. A flattering deed is worth more than many compliments and a pleasing letter worketh wonders.

—Gelett Burgess in Smart Set.

The warm weather of the last week had a decidedly prostrating effect upon society and crowded the calm that has prevailed for the last month up to the superlative degree. The tennis tournament at the Field club served as a diversion, and the school set broke out a time or two in something out of the ordinary, but aside from these, the Cowgill-Gutou dance at the Country club alone saved the week from being an admirable illustration of the term "stupid." It is not pleasant to conjecture what it would be if it were not for the visiting girls. Practically everything that has been done has been in their honor, but it must be confessed that they are not being rushed quite as hard or as elaborately as certain of the visiting matrons were a fortnight or two ago.

The fashionables seem content to adorn the verandahs of the Field and Country club evenings and Sundays, and while, of course, there are a lot of people out of town, unless one belongs to one of the clubs there are precious few places he can call evenings now-a-days unless he goes merely to leave his card. The Boat club dances over the river and the lake itself are proving immensely attractive to the younger set, as the summer wears on, and while the moonlight laced not a few of the girls exhibited a decided preference for sailing. This week there is nothing announced and the Wednesday and Saturday dinners and dances at the clubs are about the only bright spots anticipated.

The achievement of Mrs. E. H. Sprague in winning the women's championship and a silver cup for the best medal score in the qualifying round at the recent Transmississippi golf tournament at St. Louis brings credit not only upon herself, but upon the Omaha Country club as well, and she has been the recipient of enthusiastic congratulations whenever she has appeared at the Country club since. Mrs. Sprague took up the game five years ago when the Country club opened, and since then has entered in all the Transmississippi tournaments where women were admitted and has each time made an enviable record. Mrs. William T. Burns also came into prominence at the St. Louis tournament as runner-up, although she entered at the last moment, not having intended to participate when she went down.

VOTING MACHINES AT LAST

Contract Approved by County Board—Bids Submitted for Wooden Bridges This Year.

At the meeting of the Board of County Commissioners Saturday morning a contract was approved with the United States Standard Voting Machine company for thirty-five machines at the price of $60 each. The machines are to be paid for at the rate of $1000 a year, beginning with March 1 next and ending with March 1, 1910, the five certificates to bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent. The board figures this will mean a saving on each election of $400, thus more than covering the yearly expense.

Bids for building wooden bridges in the county for the coming year were received from John W. Towle, William P. Arnold, Standard Bridge company, John Gilligan Bridge company, Canton Bridge company and Campbell-Flager Bridge company. They were referred to the committee on bridges and the county engineer for tabulation. The present contractor, John W. Towle, was apparently the lowest bidder on the face of the returns.

Sixty bid 34 cents a yard for grading road 20 D, and D. V. Shipley bid 37 cents for the same work. William Olmsted bid 35 cents for grading road 20 B, and Shipley 30 cents. All the bids were referred to the committee on roads. The low bid heretofore received for grading road D was 25 cents, which was rejected at the last meeting.

Chairman Kennard was authorized to appoint five delegates to the National Irrigation congress to be held at Portland in August.

The board adjourned until Monday, July 24.

DRESHER IS FORCED TO EXPAND

Hunts New Workrooms and Engages Famous French Fashion Creator to Cut Suits.

Dresher, the most persistent advertiser among the Omaha tailors, has found it necessary to again enlarge his work room. Having long ago exhausted all the possible space at his establishment at 1515 Farnam street, he has rented the entire top floor of the Crounse block at Sixteenth street and Capitol avenue for the use of his tailors. The place on Farnam street will still be used as sales, display and cutting and fitting rooms, but garments will be made in the new work rooms, which will be the biggest and best equipped in the city and connected with the store by a private telephone line.

The Dreshers came to Omaha and went into business six years ago. Business has grown so that every year they had to make renovations or have additions built. More and better tailors and cutters have been employed from time to time to cater to the demands made upon the firm, and now a famous Parisian cutter and inventor of styles, A. H. Proud, has been employed. He will come out here direct from New York, where he has cut clothes for the late President McKinley and President Roosevelt. He invented the braided waistcoat and other fashions and is recognized by such garment makers as Pearson & Wetzel and Bell of New York and Oakley of Chicago.

The change will be made by August 15.

WOMEN IN CLUB AND CHARITY.

Now that the $100,000 for the Young Men's Christian association building is assured, the finance committee of the Young Women's Christian association will resume its work for the remaining $2,000 of the $10,000 to be paid by September 15 for its lot at the twentieth and St. Mary's avenue. An effort will be made to secure the entire amount by the last of July, as the general secretary and the president of the board of directors will both leave the city for several weeks and a number of the secretaries will be away on their vacations. A number of people have promised subscriptions, promised to send them in, and these are asked, if possible, to send their subscriptions by the last of the month that the accounts may be closed before the departure of the general secretary. The committee expects to begin its campaign for its building in the fall.

Miss Jane Perkins, one of the deaconesses who has been engaged in special work for the First Methodist church, has given up her work in Omaha for a time and gone to the home of a sister in Indiana. Miss Perkins is one of the most widely known deaconesses of the order for work among the needy in all parts of the city.

One of the recent bulletins issued by the United States bureau of Labor tells the following interesting story of the work of the club women in assisting other less fortunate women of obscure districts to adopt or revive the art of weaving as a practical means of helping themselves financially and fostering an industry that promises to profit something more than the monetary reward to its followers.

Mrs. J. Lindsey Johnson of Rome, Ga., has long been interested in the encouragement of weaving among women residing in the nearby mountains. Some coverlets have been produced and some silk rag rugs and rag rugs have also been woven. Some of the women are now learning to weave publicly in the interstate fairs held at Atlanta. The products have been sold chiefly through the art and craft committee of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. The later efforts of this committee have been directed largely toward the instruction of weaving and other handicrafts in the more remote sections of the State. Normal school and in the model day schools which have been established in mountain districts through the federation's initiative. Cornhusk hats, palm-leaf hats and baskets are among the marketable products of these schools sold by the committee.

The various rug making industries which have grown out of Mrs. Albee's pioneer efforts in New Hampshire, perhaps the most important, is the one established among the wives of fishermen on the Cranbury Isles, opposite Northeast Harbor, Me. Until the rug industry introduced there, these women, though intelligent and sufficiently well provided with the necessities of life, had little to occupy their time during the winter and but little ready money. These ambitious women were anxious for church purposes and for building a wharf, etc., and when they heard of the success of the women in making rugs, they were desirous of undertaking similar work. They were already familiar with the art of looking rugs, and they were fortunate in having the benefit of the initiative, moral support and instruction of Mrs. Albee. Her first rug was made in the winter of 1901, and one or two other New York women whose success in making rugs in the harbor, as well as obtaining the aid of capable designers. The industry was started on a small scale in the autumn of 1901, under the supervision of Miss Amy Mail Hicks, a designer identified with the art and crafts movement in New York City, who designed the patterns and gave instructions in dyeing, etc. A year later Miss Hicks retired from the management of the enterprise, and was succeeded by Miss Lou A. Clark of Cambridge, Mass., who is also a designer and had some experience in making rugs. During the first winter six rugs were made, while another dozen or so were made in the following summer at Northeast Harbor. The next winter the industry was developed on a larger scale, and twelve women working on the rugs as regularly in the spring of 1903, and all the rugs averaging about two hours a day. In the summer comparatively little work is done. One woman stencils all the designs, while another dyes all the flannel. The dyestuffs are obtained from Mrs. Albee, and are identical with those used in the Abakans rugs, but a somewhat firmer texture is obtained in the Cranbury Island rugs by using two layers of flannel to the square foot, instead of one and one-fourth or one and one-half, as in the case of the Abakans. The vegetable dyes is now under consideration.

The Cranbury Island rugs are distinguished by the monogram "C. I." worked in one corner or on the selvage at the back. Several designs have been made, with different arrangements of colors, and from time to time new patterns are prepared. Most of the rugs have been sent to various art and crafts exhibitions. The number of rugs made in the spring of 1903, and all the rugs were sold. The industry is now firmly established on a self-supporting basis.

The Women's club at Portland, N. H., among other expedients for raising money for a clubhouse, initiated a rug industry in the winter and spring of 1902. Rugs were accumulated and sewn together during the winter, and were woven according to color designs by Mrs. Frances Huston of Boston, and Mrs. H. O. Walker of New York, president of the club. Twenty rugs were made and at an art exhibition held in August all of these rugs were sold for a total of forty more. A separate organization was now formed with the name "Mothers and Daughters' Industries," and Mrs. G. S. Bugles as manager, and a trademark was adopted, consisting of a distaff and the letters "M. D. I." in the corner. Instead of using old cloth for rugs, white outing flannel is now the material desired. Many of the rugs have white centers with dashes of color, and borders at which the patterns of old-time rug-makers have been taken home with them, and exhibit has been sent to various art and crafts exhibitions. The number of rugs made in the spring of 1903, and all the rugs were sold. The industry is now firmly established on a self-supporting basis.
