Government Engineer in Charge of Work in Missouri River Sends in Statement to Interior Department.

The annual report of Major H. M. Crittenden. United States engineer in charge of the work along the Missouri river, covering a period from July 1, 1904, to July 1, 1905, has been sent in to the War Department giving a resume of the money expended under his direction.

The report states that the total amount expended during the fiscal year along the entire river for maintenance of improvements was $93.541.48. The outstanding liabilities on July 1, 1906, were $42,630.40. The total sum available on July 1, 1905, was

There has been appropriated by congress in all up to July 1, 1965, for improving the Big Muddy the sum of $5,647,840.58. Of this sum of $1,963,851.46 has been expended above Sloux City and $7,575,000 on the river below Sloux City. Sloux City is the dividing point between the upper and lower river and the projects are made separately for the two divisions of the stream.

The apportionment of the appropriation for the coming year is as follows: Five Thousand for Omaha,

One-half of this sum was ap ropriated by congress in a special act on condition that the citizens of St. Joseph raise an equal amount. The contribution has been raised and work on the big project is now about to be com-

Strangely enough no recommendations whatever are made as to future appropriations or further work. In a Sloux City paper Major Chittenden is reported to have given as his reason that it is no use to make recommendations "in view of the fact that there will be no river and harbor bill before congress this winter." It seems to be useless anyway to make recommendations or even estimates, as so little attention is paid to them by congress in considering the Missouri river. So I have made my report only to cover the expenditures at the different points last year and the results accomplished in the general scheme of improving the river so far as our limited means would permit, and to give the sums to be expended along the river during the

"That will not be necessary," said Judge Redick. "We can release them on the recognizances of the parents until court opens again, September 18.

Probation Officer Berstein said he was willing the boys should be released on bond. He thought the juvenile court law gave him the authority to arrest the boys wherever and whenever he found them if they were amenable to the provisions of the law. "That may be done in Russia," said Mr. Smyth, "but not in this country."

The probation officer still insisted that he had fustification for his acts and insisted that while this was the first time these boys had been caught, it was not the first time they had been suspected of breaking The fathers of the two boys were then

FOUR MARINERS OVERBOARD Quartet of Young People Are Shipwrecked in Wonderland and Go Home Dripping.

"Shipwrecked in Wonderland" might be ne title of an interesting story which ould be written in collaboration by four ung people who were enjoying themselves Krug park Sunday night. Whether one of the men rocked the boat or whether one of the young women sat too near the edge of the boat and, losing her balance, overtipped the craft, no one knows but the our chiefly concerned. At any rate, in the pitch-black channel just past the brilliantly lighted "City of New York" the boat was upside down and its occupants were in the dark waters of the river. Two other couples, coming in another boat, heard a succession of screams, which ended it heartrending weeping. Two bass voices pleaded and threatened atternately. The econd boat swept past the lights of the city and in the dense blackness beyond dashed into the wrecked craft. Still louder screams from the castaways. One man in the lifeboat held the vessel stationary by seizing the timbers of the wall, while the other dragged the two dripping and blubbering damsels aboard. Then they cast anchor and went forward, leaving the two hapless men to wade past polar snows and tropic palms to the point where the underground river emerges from its caverns. They were four bedraggled beings who ande their way hurriedly through the park to the car line.
