

CAPTAINS HEAD A REVOLT

Army Officers Undertake to Stampede King Ak-Sar-Ben's Guard.

LIVELY EVENING AT SAMSON'S RECEPTION

Many Guests Present, Many Happy Speeches Made and a General Good Time Enjoyed by All But Some.

Every cheek was blanched and every eye dimmed at the Ak-Sar-Ben last evening when Captain Stogsdall of the Thirtieth Infantry hurried over the ramparts and tried to score a touchdown against a score of the Ak-Sar-Ben's guard.

While in reality last evening had been designated as "Rock Island night," there were so many visitors from various parts of the state and country, to say nothing of the captains and lieutenants, it would hardly be fair to say that any one section had particular claim on the evening at the den.

Over 100 out-of-town guests were at the royal hall last evening and every one enjoyed himself from overture to the time the last sandwich faded from view.

Speakers of the Evening. Attorney Ralph W. Breckenridge was grand marshal for the evening.

Next Monday evening will be "Missouri Pacific" night, and delegations are expected from Auburn, Falls City, Nebraska City and Plattsmouth.

If satisfactory train service can be arranged, the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben will accept the invitation extended by the citizens of Grand Island to attend the harvest festival on the 18th instant, which date has been set aside for Omaha people.

Samson said last evening that the report that had gone out to the effect that the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben had given over the street fair to a carnival company, reserving one or two attractions as strictly Ak-Sar-Ben features, is entirely erroneous and without foundation.

"The Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben will have entire control of the street fair this fall, as it always has had in previous years. It is likely that negotiations will be made with some large carnival company to send three or four of its best attractions for the street fair," said Samson.

ONE MEDICINE THAT HAS NEVER FAILED

Health Fully Restored and the Joy of Life Regained

When a cheerful, brave, light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the BLUES, it is a sad picture. It is usually this way. "She has been feeling out of sorts."

Mrs. Rosa Adams

for some time; head has ached and back also; has slept poorly, been quite nervous and nearly fainted once or twice; head dizzy and heart-beats very fast; then that bearing-down feeling, and during her menstrual period she is exceedingly despondent.

Don't wait until your sufferings have driven you to despair, with your nerves all shattered and your courage gone, but take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is what it did for Mrs. Rosa Adams, of 819 12th Street, Louisville, Ky., niece of the late General Roger Hanson, C.S.A. She writes: Dear Mrs. Pinkham—

I cannot tell you with pen and ink what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered with female troubles, extreme lassitude, the blues, nervousness and that all-gone feeling. I was advised to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has returned me to perfect health and strength.

If you have some derangement of the female organism write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice.

ALL IN THE CHECK BURNER

Councilmen Conclude from Lynch's Gas Test How to Effect Saving.

MAY PUBLISH POINTERS ON ITS USE

Twelfth Ward Protestants Present Their Objections to Redistricting and Get Promise of Some Changes Today.

Councilman O'Brien and his lighting committee watched City Gas Inspector Lynch's burn gas through a Welshburn burner yesterday afternoon and learned much about the business they never knew before.

A further test is to be made beginning with tonight, after the session of the council.

With only a short test Inspector Lynch found that the regular city light through the Welshburn burner consumed almost six feet of gas an hour or about what the company claimed it consumed.

With the check burner a twenty-three-candle power light consumed almost six feet or about the same as the Welshburn, though there was no comparison in the lights, the Welshburn being much brighter.

Putting on a regular pillar and removing the check burner the gas consumed amounted to fourteen feet an hour, with the light no better.

It is the use of the ordinary pillar instead of the check burner, the councilman concluded, that causes gas bills in private families to be so high each month, and at the same time have no better light.

They advocated issuing pamphlets on gas burners to be distributed throughout the city.

May Pile the Steel. In committee the city council granted permission to the contractor on Hayden Brothers store to pile his steel and iron in front of the Patterson block in the street.

W. E. Ten Eyck and Charles Lindsay, a Republican club, took up the matter of the redistricting of the ward with Harry Zimman to whose committee the ordinance was referred.

Mr. Zimman assured the committee that he would listen to protests and while the ward could not get more precincts he had no objections to changing the present lines.

The contractor for the engine house which was recently completed and for which the city owes in the neighborhood of $2,000, came before the committee with his claim and was told there was no money to meet the obligation.

After a discussion of the matter the committee recommended the contractor, City Attorney Breen asked that nothing be done until he could consider it further.

The site selected for the encampment is a beautiful grove adjoining Riverview park.

CONGRESS OVER INSURANCE

Government Control of Business Advocated by American Bar Committee.

CHAIRMAN BRECKENRIDGE DRAWS REPORT

Minority Statement Will Be Presented but Majority is Expected to Have Weight with Next Congress.

First—Legislation by congress providing for the supervision of insurance companies.

Second—The repeal of the act of 1889 which prohibited the use of the mails to all persons for the purpose of conducting the business of insurance in disregard of state or federal regulations.

Third—A uniform fire policy, the terms of which shall be specifically defined.

Fourth—The repeal of all retaliatory tax laws.

Fifth—Stricter incorporation laws in the several states whereby to effect the creation of insurance companies and the federal statute prohibiting the use of the mails to all persons for the purpose of conducting the business of insurance in disregard of state or federal regulations.

These are the five recommendations that will be made to the annual convention of the American Bar association at Narragansett Pier August 23-25, by its committee, headed by Ralph W. Breckenridge, chairman of the American Bar association of Omaha in chairmanship of this important committee and as such has drawn up the report.

It is expected that action on this report by the bar association will have a decided effect on the action to be taken later by the congress.

The committee is composed of Ralph W. Breckenridge, Omaha, chairman; Burton Smith, Atlanta, Ga.; R. A. Mearns, Towanda, Pa.; W. A. Hemenway, of Boston, who is to deliver the annual address to the association this year, and W. R. Vance of Virginia.

Minority Report by Vance. Mr. Vance is expected to offer a minority report in which he will disagree with the committee, not on the general findings, but on the proposition that there is no constitutional objection to the existing business of federal supervision of the insurance business.

Mr. Vance believes it would require an amendment to the national constitution to permit of the government taking over control of the business.

The report at the outset makes note of the fact that the amount of insurance of all kinds in force in the United States approximates $50,000,000,000 and that the aggregate assets of the companies approximate $100,000,000,000.

The report also states that the business of insurance of all kinds is $1,000,000,000 in round figures and they received back in the year ending December 31, 1904, $80,000,000. This is exclusive of fraternal beneficiary associations and local mutual fire insurance companies.

Roosevelt Favors Plan. President Roosevelt is expected to have a report submitted to him by the committee which is in favor of federal supervision of insurance, and his utterance on the subject in his message to congress of December 6, 1904, is quoted at length.

Of the settlement of the insurance companies' claims with regard to the report says: Publicly as related to corporations that have or seek either public franchises or public favor means more than a responsive advertisement of an unwarranted statement of the association.

Each company must show to that department of government, state or federal, in which it is doing the business, that its affairs are conducted honestly and equitably, and that its business is operated upon a plan which experience has shown to be in the public interest.

After an introduction to the subject of federal supervision and the question of its desirability, the report says: The officials of the leading companies, both nationally and locally, are generally in favor of national supervision, and they generally favor the establishment of a federal department to which they now must make returns to state insurance commissioners are also in favor of federal supervision.

The receipt by state insurance departments of several millions yearly in excess of what supervision costs is denounced as iniquitous and the report says the expense of federal supervision is not to be overlooked.

The receipt by state supervision now costs, thus lifting "an unnecessary burden from all who seek to provide for their families and to avert disaster from fire through insurance."

Discussing the matter of taxation, the report says certain states tax foreign companies higher than they do their own companies. The states using the retaliatory taxation system are alluded to as "having forgotten that this is a union of states."

Such laws are denounced as "inimical to the federal compact, and increase the cost of insurance in the retaliatory state."

Federal supervision is held as a remedy for this vexed problem of taxation, and, besides, it is set forth "would require a strict accounting of the uses made of the immense sums accumulated through the prudence, sacrifice and thrift of millions of policyholders and will prevent imprudent and improper investments and extravagant management."

Assuming that federal supervision is constitutional, practicable and desirable, says the report, the plan by which it can best be accomplished must necessarily be left to congress in the matter of its adoption.

Franchises or national incorporation—the committee refuses to express an opinion.

Interstate or Not? The question of whether or not insurance is interstate business is gone into at length and a long line of decisions are quoted touching the point. He reports say: "It does not follow because a thing is new that it may not be covered by the constitution, for Marshall characterized the constitution as intended to endure for ages to come, and not to be adapted to the various crises of human affairs."

It is set out that but for insurance "commerce as we know it, credit as it is, civilization as we live it, would not have been possible."

He has been quoted and the conclusion is drawn that "the constitution is sufficiently expansive to cover even instrumentalities of commerce that were not in existence at the time of its adoption."

Congress itself is asserted to have directly in words declared insurance to be commerce in the act creating the Department of Commerce and Labor.

Of the valued policy laws in force in nineteen or twenty of the states the report says these policies call for the payment of the full amount named in the policy regardless of value of the stock at the time of the fire.

The conclusion of the committee is that "no eye ought to be put on the value of the property destroyed."

The committee puts itself strongly on record in favor of the uniform policy laws in the states, if there is to be no federal supervision of insurance.

Less Power for Statesmen. The committee asserts that insurance commissioners or state auditors have now altogether too much power in the matter of the revocation of state licenses. A modification of these laws is recommended so that the companies which fall under the displeasure of commissioners of states having such laws might have a chance to be heard in defense and also have an appeal, if necessary, to the courts.

The laws of some states which aim to prevent the transference of suits on insurance policies from state to federal courts are held to be too stringent and the committee favors an effort to have them made more lenient.

Under the heading, "Statutes Encouraging Suicide," the committee says that some states in California, New York, and New Jersey to compel the right to defend against death claims when the insured has committed suicide. Such laws are characterized as an inducement to suicide rather than otherwise.

Underground or without insurance companies are given critical consideration as a detriment to all honest insurance, and the suggestion is made that only a national law will be competent to deal effectively with this abuse of the insurance laws.

ECHO FROM STRANGE SOURCE

Latest Story in Cudaly Case Comes from East and Excludes Pat Crowe.

From New York comes the very latest development of the Cudaly kidnaping case. False or true, the New York police, through Inspector Cross, are investigating the story handed them Saturday last by a letter to detective headquarters, Inspector Cross, who has been handling the case against Frederick E. Carlton, or McCandless, the Brooklyn "Bluebeard" who promises to yet eclipse the record of Johann Hoch, on paper at least, on Saturday received a letter to the effect that the man now in his custody was concerned in the Cudaly kidnaping crime in Omaha, some five years ago.

Inspector Cross's information asserts that Carlton had in his possession a picture of the missing boy's clothing and wrote a letter offering to restore the boy for a ransom. This communication, says the letter, was first written by Carlton, then copied by a woman living on Fourteenth street, near Ohio avenue, Washington.

Inspector Cross expressed the opinion that there was probably nothing in the letter, but at the same time he said he was not going to take any chances and would investigate to see whether in the hope of getting a further line on Carlton's doings.
