STRANGE FREAKS OF LIGHTNING

Many persons have been killed by lightning and many more have suffered after recovering from the shock.

A stroke of lightning has even amputated a limb, as in the case of a boy at Crosson, Poland, as recorded by the medical profession.

The boy's right knee was split from the knee to the hip, and when riding in a field during a violent storm a loud peal of thunder made the horse run away, throwing the child to the ground.

When the boy recovered he found his senses he found that his right leg was missing, having been cut off at the knee, leaving a perfectly round end below the patella or kneecap.

There were signs of burning about the body, from all of which the missing leg was found near where he had thrown by the horse, and he was taken to the hospital.

Dr. Canby of Paris gives the case of a woman who had two children killed by lightning in her presence. She herself was rendered unconscious for four days, and she was taken to the hospital.

After regaining her senses she found that her right arm was missing, and she was taken to the hospital. She fully recovered in three weeks.

Two years afterward, in a thunder-storm, she had a similar attack, although there was no visible lightning. Three years later, under similar circumstances, she again had a like attack.

Dr. MacDonald of England reports a woman of 78 years of age who some forty-two years previously, while ironing a cap with an Italian iron, was struck by lightning and fell back into a chair.

On recovering consciousness she found that the cap, which she had left on the table some distance from the iron, had been transformed into cinders. Her clothing was not burned, nor was she hurt.

She declared that as a consequence she could predict when the lightning was about to fall, and she has since been a fortune teller.

It is also said that shortly before and during a thunderstorm she always became nauseated. It seems that in this case the nerves were charged with electricity, and the numbness increased on these occasions.
