McBrien Speaks for West.

State Superintendent McBrien has returned from a trip to the highlands between Sidney and Hay Springs in Sheridan county and there he was surprised to find flourishing fields of wheat and potatoes, which makes him feel justified in predicting a great future for the western section of the state. He says that in a cross country drive from Alliance to Hay Springs he discovered that there is an evident change in the character of the vegetation. Buffalo grass is giving way to the blue stem and gramma grass. This he considers an indication of a change in the climate, grain which he saw in the typical range country. Much of the wheat, he estimates, will run thirty bushels to the acre.

During the last week he led a strenuous life, making a speech or two every day and riding over 1,000 miles on the railway in addition to two long drives. He slept whenever he could, as it was not possible to keep any of the regular hours known to the man of steady habits. His western run was made Wednesday, when he went to Sidney. Thence he went to Alliance by railway and that afternoon at miles distant. After taking supper at in connection with the state fair. the sod postoffice at Box Butte, he argived at his destination at 11:30 at night. At Valentine he addressed the teachers at the junior normal. There he was surprised to learn what a vogue the idea of school gardens had acquired. At the school a common vegetables because of their residence in the range region. He believes than many of them took home lessons which will show them the possibility of can be watered by windmills. This development will mean much for the west, he says.

NORFOLK—Jack Weston, a former slave and for fifteen years a well known character in Norfolk, was found dead on the floor of an old building where he had lived this morning. He lay face downward. He came to Norfolk when the sugar factory started with a carload of other beet weeders from Omsha. Burial expenses, for the sake of saving him from the medical college, were defrayed by public subscription. PLATTSMOUTH—Several years ago a young man named James C Vernatien came to Nebraska from thio and when his relatives last heard from him he was located in Plattsmouth. Since then it has become known that he is the heir to considerable roal estate at Portsmouth. O, and an attorney of that place is now instituting a search for him. No Information as to his present whereabouts has thus far been obtained. The activity of the United States district attorney's office in prosecuting the land encing cases is causing no little tribula ion to the cattlemen in the North Platte Valentine and Alliance districts, and reports from special agents of the land de partment now in these fields indicate that the fences are coming down rapidly. It is known that leading representatives of the cattle men have been to Washington to try and call off the prosecutions, and it is incidentally rumored that a strong effor has been made to secure the removal of the officials who have been so earnest in ferreting out these cases.
