FORT RILEY, Kan., Aug. 28.—(Special.)

—Work on the progressive military map of the United States, begun in 1825 and interrupted by the war with Spain, has been resumed. Under the original pian one or more officers were sent out yearly from each military post in the United States and required to thoroughly map an area approximately one degree of longitude in length and one-half a degree of latitude in width. The map was required to show the character of roads, streams, fords, bridges, soil, crops, woods, hills and ig general any information of military value. At the outset no data was furnished from Washington, and the results obtained varied largely, according to the ability of industry of the officer detailed. This year, however, the published sheets of the United States geological survey have been furnished by the War department, and the officers are required to thoroughly cover the territory and to note on the sheets of the geological survey the required military beformation. The results will natural in character. Provision has been made for mounts and orderlies for infantry officers, the orderlies to draw commutation of rations. In this manner the officer is supposed to put up at hotels and farm houses as he works around his district. The officers detailed from this post, however, will be accompanied by small parties and will live in tents. They will probably he supplied from the post with rations and forage by means of the post pack train, but each officer has been made a commissary, in order that he may be able to purchase fresh meats and like supplies along the route. First Lieutenant George Steunenberg, Thirteenth cavalry; Second Lieutenant W. G. Meade, Eleventh cavalry, Second Lieutenant S. W. Winfree, Ninth cavalry, and Second Lieutenant P. D. Glassford, artillery corps, have been detailed from this post and will begin the work early next week. They will establish headquarters at central points on their districts, probably at Junction City, Wamego, Seneca and Marysville Kan.

First Lieutenant E. T. Donnelly, artillery corps, left Monday for Fort Moarce, Va., where he will spend a year taking a course of instruction in the artillery school. He is succeeded as adjutant of the artillery subpost here by Second Lieutenant R. M. Danford.

Second Lieutenant C. E. Hathaway, Ninth cavalry, has succeeded Lieutenant Donnelly as manager of the post base ball team. The next game will be played with the Ellsworth. Kan. team.
