TALE OF VIGILANTE TIMES

Efficacy of a Swift Noose in Checking the Pace of Criminals.

CHAPTER OF MONTANA'S YOUNG LIFE

Part Played by the Late Senator Sanders in Cleaning Out the Border Rumans Infecting Mining Camps in Early Days.

The story of the vigilantes of Montana is an old one and has oft been told, but the death of Wilbur Fisk Sanders, leader and prosecutor for the organization, lends to he record the human interest that ever attaches to a triumph of order over disorder and crime. San Francisco had a simihr experience a decade before the Montana camps were born. Similar methods were employed in numerous western camps. Summary punishment of criminals became necessary us a measure of self-defense. and out of the vortex of outlawry sprang law and order, signalizing the right of life, Aberty and property upon which civilization is founded.

A correspondent of the New York Bun, mays in part:

Montana was a part of Idaho in 183. when Colonel Sanders arrived there. He and had fought in the civil war. He setwhere he began to make a living as a law-

Bannock City was only about a year old and Virginia City and Nevada City, close were no livelier settlements than these on the face of the earth. The craze for gold affidavits that all warrants were issued. had collected there California gambiers and cutthroats, Mexican desperadoes, desorters from both the federal and the confederate armies, fugitives from justice of a dozen countries, and last and almost lead, a few honest miners and peaceful immigrants. There was little government and no law except a limited quantity of the home-made article. It was here that Colonel Sanders became prosecuting attor-

Pinmmer's Gang.

There was trouble waiting for the sheriff. Henry Plummer was the head of a big gang of road agents and murderers. Plummer's gang was the only well organized sisted of about two dozen "bad men" and a large number of spies, sceuts and outside agents who prompted the writers of dime | fense. movels to do their worst. In action they wore black ailk handkerchiefs over their faces, and their secret service system told them of every expedition worth robbing.

Individually the members of Plummer's until it reached the sum of $400. gang were murderers who put small valuation on human life. They killed for vengeance sometimes, for personal dislike sometimes, even for "luck." women to frighten them and killed Indians for no reason but pure wantonness.

"Durch John" and Steve Marsland of the when he started for Sait Lake City with from in gold, and Plummer himself first interviewed the passengers of Oliver's Salt lake coach when it rolled into Bannock after having been held up by Plummer's Formation of the Vigilantes. This was the gang that engaged the attention of Colonel Sanders, and the movement which brought about the hanging of twenty-two of them, including Plummer himself, followed the formation of the Montana vigilantes, of which Colonel Sanders was the active head.

The prosecution of George Ives was the beginning of the end of Plummer and his gang. In the few months preceding the uprising there had been a reign of terror in which no man felt that his life was safe. There had been no less than 102 known murders which were charged to the Plummer gang.

Ives was one of the gang. He was sent to buy two mules from a German-Nicholas Thalt in the Stinkingwater valley-and murdered the German to save paying for the mules. He was caught redhanded, and a crowd of citizens dragged him to Nevada City. Ives didn't worry any over his arrest, but this time the miners were aroused, and sent for Colonel Sanders.

The trial took place in the open air before a huge bonfire late in the afternoon of Decermber 21, 1863. Citizens came from miles around to attend. The judge sat in a wagon. Colonel Sanders had a clear case against Ives, and he made the most of every bit of evidence. The jury, which was composed of the better element of miners, found the prisoner guilty, and the prosecutor moved that he be hanged at once.

Then for a few minutes it was a question whether Sanders or Ives would be the first to die. In the crowd were many friends of the prisoner and of Plummer's gang. The arrival of Plummer with a rescuing gang was momentarily expected, and part of the mob made an attempt at rescue, but it was repulsed. A pole was swung out of the window of an unfinished house near by, and in fifty-eight minutes after he was convicted the body of Ives swung on a rope from the end of it. That was the beginning of the campaign against Henry Plummer's

Wholesale Hangings. Colonel Sanders was backed up by the decent men in the vicinity and he made the most of his first victory. With five men in Virginia City, three others in Bannock and one in Nevada City be formed the Montana vigilantes, a secret tribunal which for the next twenty years exerted a powerful influence upon the territory. Within two weeks the little band had a hold in every settlement in the region. In a little more than a month the vigilantes had captured, sentenced to death and hanged twontwo members of Plummer's band, including Pluromer himself. The vivilantes held no public trials, and when their work was done there was nothing left for a judge to attend to.

Viguanto executions took place almost daily in January, 1864. Plummer and two He extracted the thorn, the iton roaring of his men died in Bannock City on the same day, and four days later five more City. The vigilantes were judges, jury withdrew. and executioners, all in one. The trials were about as trief as can be imagined. When a murderer or thief was caught the captain of the vigilante band would say:

"All in favor of langing this man step to the right of the read; those who are for letting him go step to the left."

conspicuously in front of a ranch. The cards measured exactly 7x9 inches, and on them, in very black ink, appeared the numerals, "3-1-7." The desperado who found such a notice knew that it came from the vigilantes, and he knew that it meant "Pack up and leave within twentyfour hours or swing on the second night. The vigilantes never bluffed. they posted a warning they were ready to enforce it. Perhaps a mistake was made once in a long time, and in such case the victim at once sought out Colonel Sanders or X. Beldler, his right hand man, or some other prominent vigilante, and laid the case before him as man to man. If the plea seemed good the midnight tribunal reconsidered and sometimes reversed itself. Sometimes it reaffirmed the sentence by a second placard, and in such a case there was no appeal. If the victim disregarded the card be found himself on the second night in the hands of a crowd of very earnest armed men. A hanging always followed.

The Trial of Sinde. When Senator Sanders was in Washington he told the story of the execution of the notorious Slade for "treason against the territory of Montana."

"We had engineered forty or fifty hangings," he said, "when we became imbued with the idea that a little more lawful form of government would be to the better interests of Virginia City, so one evening reciting the events of forty-two years ago. | we gathered on the outskirts of the town in informal mass meeting and proceeded to choose from among ourselves officers for our local government. We would turn to one of our members and tled at Bannock City, a mining camp, say: 'You are a pretty square sort of a fellow and we know you to be straight as a string; you shall be our judge. And to another: You are a heavily built chap, with plenty of grit; you shall be marshal." by, were just getting on the map. > "It seems strange in these days to think of constituting a court in such an off-hand way without the slightest vestige of federal authority, but we did it, and our court was respected by all the citizens of Virginia City-that is: most of them. After a while, when they found that we were not hanging so frequently as before, the lawless element grew bolder and more aggressive.

"The leader of this tough part of our population was Stade. He had a dozen satellites, and it was a favorite diversion of theirs to spend a night in a disorderly resort and then set it on Gre. Soon after our court was organized we found that Slade had burned a place, and we sent our band of men in the community and con- marshal to arrest him and bring him to court. He came peaceably enough, and the court fined him $25. He paid, and in a correspondents. These were the road few days was up again for the same of-

Well, he came to town several times after that, but he did not offer to pay the $400, and soon he was in trouble Plummer himself was said to be the again for the same old offense.

A Bluff that Failed. "Our marshal got him, and he came along quietly and stood while the judge directed the marshal to read the warrant. As the marshal pullled out the document Slade. quick as a flash, sprang at him, jerked it out of his hands and pointed a revolver taken part in an attack on a Wells-Fargo at the judge's heart. It was all done in a second.

" 'Now,' said he, 'I'm about fired of this the territory, started east with a load of business. "While he was speaking I turned quietly and walked out. On the street the first man I met was a member of our vigilance committee. I explained the situation to him and asked him to ride to camp, about two miles and tell the boys we needed them. He rode off post haste, and I returned to the court room. Slade rode around town for a while and then returned there. He was inclined to be very proud of his defiance of the orders of the court and was insulting to his honor. The next minute the room was full of armed men and one of them was saying: 'We want you, Mr. Slade,'

"He turned pale and weakened at once A crowd of his captors surrounded him and I left him in their keeping and went home. I hadn't been there five minutes when one of the boys came up and said: " 'Mr. Sanders, the boys have about con cluded that they don't want to be bothered with Mr. Slade any longer and as there is no place to keep him safely they are going to hang him whether the court wills it or not. "I hurried to the court room and saw the judge and the marshal, and several others and we agreed that as Mr. Slade was bound to hang anyway, it was better to have him executed by order of the court and thus preserve our hold on the community. So we sentenced him to death for high treason, for inciting others to rebellion and for seeking to overthrow our form of govern-

OSMOSIS FAMILIAR TO DUCK John Burroughs Duplicates a Story on Animal Instinct with One Equally Wonderful.

John Burroughs, the naturalist, was aughlng about the story, widely published not long since, of a wild duck that got a salt water mussel caught on its tongue and had intelligence enough to fly from the sait to the fresh water, where it dipped the mussel sickening it through osmosis, and thus causing it to loosen its firm grip.

"I believe that story of the duck that un derstood the theory of osmosis," said Mr. Burroughs. "I believe it as implicitly as I believe the story of the crippled lion and the young lieutenant.

CATTLE—There were not enough cattle here today to make a fair test of the market, which practically closed yesterday. The receipts for the week were liberally heavier than last week by about twenty-cight loads and heavier than the same week last year about 354 cars. About four-fifths of the cattle were western grassers and the remaining one-fifth were cornfeds of fairly good quality.

The market on beef steers was very satisfactory as the week, conditions favoring isfactory an the week, conditions favoring selling interests. Good native cattle sold fully %c higher for the week and there was a good, strong demand for this class of stuff. Buyers were anxious for cattle and were ready to pay for anything showing quality. The medium and common kinds which come in competition with the

...1480 2 30 HOGS-There was about the usual Saturday's run here, ninety loads being on sale. Buyers were in an extremely bearish mood this morning and were asking concessions which sellers were slow to make and the result was a slow, dull, draggy market all through the morning. Salesmen with heavy weights found conditions decidedly against them and some could not even get bids on their holdings. Good, light, medium and shipping grades sold fairly well, but at a decline of Phance. As the morning advanced buyers became more bearish and the market weakened still more. After the first round or two, and after the more urgent orders had been filled, trading came to a standstill, with about one-half of the hogs sold. The market was long-drawn-out, but his morning and were asking concessions old. The market was long-drawn-out, but about everything was finally picked up a the decline noted above. Representative

SHEEP-There were no fresh arrivals today, and as everything was cleaned up yesterday the big barn was deserted. While the receipts for the week were light, they were heavier than last week, but not of such good quality. The market was in a very satisfactory condition all the week,
the only drawback being the light receipts.
There was a good strong call from all sources and the supply has hardly equaled the demand. On Monday the market broke lognise all around and trading was slow and dull, but from then on values had an upward tendency and the loss was more than regained. Sheep and yearlings for the week are a little stronger than the close of last week and some salesmen call them logific higher. Lambs are fully stendy and the highest price of the season, st.40, was paid during the week.
There were not near enough feeder sheep and lambs here to meet the requirements of the trade and feedor buyers were not able to do much. There is a strong demand for feeders here and there are plenty of orders waiting to be filled. On this class of sheep the market is logific higher for the week, with the trade in good active condition. or the week, with the trade in good active

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—WOOL—Market firm; domestic fleece, 35639c.

BOSTON, Aug. 20.—WOOL—The Commercial Bulletin says of the wool market that a large amount of terriwool terriing quality. The medium and common kinds which come in competition with the westerns do not show any advance and are steady to a shade lower for the week. Some choice natives sold yesterday for $4.15, the best prices paid on this market for cattle since last May. Good grassers ruied generally stronger for the week and there was a fair demand noted, but the common grades were just about the same as the medium natives.

The cow and helfer trade was not as satisfactory as it might have been in different was a weak tone to the trade all through. Along the first of the week the market broke badily and the loss was not wholly regained, although the last two market days there was a better feeling and prices picked up a little. On both natives and grassers the market stands a dime lower, although the real prime stuff may not be off as much as this. The liberal supply held the westerns down and the natives were hurt by the decline on grassers.

Bulls in a stight that a large amount of territory wools, including new sales and deliveries on contract, has changed hands, which is estimated at 12,000 to 18,000 buls. Prices are tending upward and the market is very strong and stea. The larger mills are again buying in future requirements, it is understood, white the same as the market sare as at slight concessions and it is said by some that the movement has been heavy, while others take the position that conditions preclude substantial contractors. Pulled wools, whenever available, readily at top prices. The season for Australian and South American wools is return wools, including new sales and deliveries on contract, has changed hands, which is estimated at 12,000 to 18,000 buls. Bulls, veal calves and stags ruled just about steady for the week.

The stocker and feeder trade was in good shape all the week and there was a good, strong demand for good cattle. There were plenty of orders and trading was active all the week and the stockers and feeder were stronger for the week and common kinds were fully steady. Representative sales:

For Old Times. "Say, mister," began Ruffon Wrats, can't re-" "O drop that mendicant whine, you slimy old rascal," interrupted Fellatre-formerly Rusty Rufus- "and straighten up, as if you had some pride in your vocation. The type of hobo that infests the country in these degenerate days fills me with a sense of weariness!"

Grabbing him by the shoulders and turning him around, he straightened him up with a kick, tossed a big, shining dollar at him, wiped his hands on a white slik hand-kerchief, threw the handkerchief away, and walked on with a melancholy sigh for the old, careless days that were gone forever .-Chicago Tribune.
