assembly the pastors of all local Presbyterian churches yesterday in their pulpits in one form and another, presented the re-lation of the gospel to inbor. inasmuch as today is Labor day and will thus us celebrated throughout the United States. One of the striking sermons of the day was that preached by Rev. A. S. C. Clarko at the Lowe Avenue church, Rev Mr. "tavke spoke from the text, "The king dom of God is now at hand," Matthew x:11.

At the outset Mr. Clarke said it was not his purpose minutely to enter into discussion of the labor question or any phase of it, but only to show the true relation of the gospel to labor which Christ. Himself a workman, preached first to man This he did eloquently and with impressiv:

Mr. Clarke asserted that "the kingdom of God is the philosophy of history." He said by the very exigencies of life to look to N was present today and accessible to all a future state where inequalities will be who lived for Christ. It was not necessary to awalt eternity to realize the kingdown of God. For proof he turned to his text. "The kingdom of God is at hand." The laborer who tolled in that kingdom which the Great Workman established on earth when He was tolling among His fellowmen, Mr. Clarke said, was the la borer who was fulfilling his Master's will. The gospel and labor went hand in hand, for the Christ of the gospel was Himself a laborer and there was no reason, said Mr. Clarke, why any other workman could not, in his daily toil, serve God-"I want no church calendar to tell m what day in the week to serve the Lord,' said Mr. Charke. "I want to serve Hin every day-six as well as one, and that is what every workman should do."

Mr. Clarke referred to the amelioration of the conditions of labor through organization-shorter hours, higher wages and more employment. He spoke in optimistic vein of present day conditions and the better understanding that is growing up between capital and labor. "The good eld days were not like unto these days," he said. "We are living in the good days and our opportunities are greater than men even enjoyed before."

FEAST DAY AT ST. PHILOMEN

Father James Aberne Preaches o Fruitfulness of Self-Sacrifice.

The feast day of St. Philomena, patro saint of the parish and of the Omaha dio cese, was celebrated Sunday morning at St. Philomena's cathedral with all the imessiveness and dignity that the rubric of the Catholic church prescribes for such occasions. Four masses were celebrated, the earliest at 6 o'clock. It was at the high mass, at 10:30, that the panegyric of the saint was pronounced, with Bishop Lord?" Scannell on the panegyric throne, surrounded by a group of his clergy. Father James Aherne delivered the eulogy, and in doing so drew some plain lessons of duty to God and man from the experiences of the saint which ended in martyrdom.

'Man is worthy of honor and esteem, said Father Aherne, "not because of who and truth. When trouble - acs they say, he is, in what country born, or whether his station be high or lowly, but for what beauty.

WORK TOGETHER IN FELLOWSHIP

Rev. R. L. Purdy Respeaks Christian Co-operation in His Work.

Rev. R. L. Purdy began his new pastorate at the Clifton Hill Presbyterian church Sunday morning, preaching from Corinthians L chapter til. His sermon was preceded by a short informal talk in which he expressed his gratitude at being enabled to begin his work for the church with this congregation. He stated that his family. was with him and he trusted that the social and spiritual work of the church would prosper by united effort on the part of paster and people. He said, in part:

We are workers together in fellowship with God. We live in a world where ceaseless activity is the law of life. It is impossible for a man to live an abnormal life. If activity ceases, enthusiasm ceases. We must labor in the same way and together. Multitudes are called upon to labor, some with their hands and some with their brains. When we cease to labor we retrograde. We must act or we will rust out. He who becomes weary in good work is even better than he who does nothing at all
