PUBLIC AND PRIVATE BEGIN WORK

Indications Are that at High School Sourceident Attendance Will " Be Larger Than Usual.

Many a prospective kindergartner and primary grader did not get away even with the bunch at the opening of schools, Tuesday morning because of the chilly weather and the stendy downpour of rain. Princi-pals said the enrollment on the first day this fall may run behind those of other years when the opening day was fair. The sloppy streets and the leaden skies kept parents in all parts of the city from sending tender youngsters to school and they decided to wait for fairer meteorological conditions.

The public schools began the year's work without delays, accidents or unusual events, so far as reported to the office of the super-Intendent. Only a few teachers were detained by sickness or other reasons from taking charge of their classes and substitutes had been arranged for in advance. The size of the staff was increased by seven instructors for the three additional rooms in the new Beals school, one at Druid Hill, one at Monmouth Park, one at Central Park annex, called the Omaha Heights school, and the new manual training department at the Pacific school.

The Pacific manual training school will be in operation within a few days. The slow arrival of materials and supplies caused a slight delay.

High School Shows Increase. At the high school the advance payment of tuition for outside students indicated a larger attendance from this source than ever before. In addition Principal Waterhouse is counting on an increased enrollment of Omaha students. No attendance reports will be in until Wednesday morning, however. Superintendent Davidson does not anticipate any increases in the

The manual training department at high school is to be given a chance to spread out some by a provision for extra room made by reeding over a space between the new and old buildings. The work will cost about $700, and a permit has been secured from the city for the construction.

The classical departments of Creighton university and nearly all the parochial and convent schools and academies opened Tuesday. All anticipate a bigger attendance than ever before, but were unable to give accurate figures until later in the

The commercial colleges and business universities began the season's work Monday with membership rolls showing gratifying advances over last and previous years.

County Schools Open. County Superintendent of Schools Bodwell reports today that of his ninety-nine teachers forty-three, or 48 per cent, are new ones. Most of the rural schools of the county opened their sessions on Monday, the only exception being those county schools which are within the environments of Omaha.

WHERE MEN OF POETRY GET ON

Sentimental Side of Transition from Vacation to "Sku-ul."

"Now, Johnny, I will not call you again. You know school begins this morning. Sister Nellie has been up this hour and is nearly ready for school," remarked a fond Omaha mother Tuesday morping to her 19year old boy. No doubt the same remark fell from the lips of a hundred fond

"Alright, maw, I'll be up in a few minutes. Say, Nell, where's my shoes. I believe you hid them on purpose," drawled the boy as he donned his new school suit. In many cases the name of the boy was not Johnny, nor that of the girl Nellie, but anyway the Omaha public schools opened Tuesday morning, and that meant much in most of the homes. In a collective sense Johnny and Nellie were on hand, even if in some cases the boy did have to do a rapid sprint to get under the wire before the bell rang.

While the first day of school is not a representative one of the school year, yet has particular significance in the life of a boy or girl; has no less significance to the loving mothers, who in most cases have been busy for weeks arranging new garments for the young hopefuls, and means a busy and anxious day for the teachers.

From time immemorial the sight of a group of school children tripping merrily to their lessons, care free and buoyant, has moved poets to tune their lyres to the music of the child and to cause sages to stop and gather new inspirations. It is one of the sights that makes the whole world

As Omaha's army of school childrenabout 16,000-gathered at the various places of learning Tuesday morning many little incidents occurred along the way to remind the "old felks" of the days that are no more for them. Clasped arm in arm wars more for them. Clasped arm in arm were twos and threes of the older girls, exchanging girlish confidences and telling of vaca tions spent. Girls somewhat younger told each other of the new dolls they had received and of the many doll dresses they had made. "The littlest girl" had to come to school with her mother, older sister or a brother, and took a doll with her, just for the first day. In a half-frightened way she looked around the kindergarten room and held tightly to her dollie. As for the boys! "Bless their little hearts every one of them. There are no bad boye," says Bob Burdette.

It is said it is harder for a boy to give up his summer vacation than it is for a girl. To change from the outdoor life, with the trees, hirds, animals, old and easy clothes. sun-tanned sitin, the ole' swimmin' hole playin' Indian, penny shows and all the rest of it, to new clothes and the confines of a school room, is not the ensiest task for a boy. But all the boys were on hand and stood at attention while the girl kissed the teachers.

ONLY URE AND OSTROM FILE

Two Candidates for County Commis stoner Go on Record at Court House.

Up to 2 o'clock Tuesday only two of the preferred condidates for county commi sioner in the Fifth district had paid their money to the county treasurer and filed their nomination with the county clerk. After obtaining an order from Judge Redick last Saturday Henry Ostrom paid his money and filed his papers Tuesday.

While W. J. Hunter has not joined in the proceeding with the others, on which Judge Redick's decision was rendered, he had the same right as the others under the decision, the obtaining of the order and the filling of his treasurer's receipt with the county clerk being a merely for-mal proceeding. W. G. Ure got into the race carry by following up the court order.
