RELIEF FOR THE HAY FEVER German Professor Said to Have Discovered an Autitoxin that

Does the Work.

An account of the experiments of Prof. Dunbar of Hamburg with a hay fever antitoxin is furnished by Consul General Guenther to the Department of Commerce and Labor. He says;

Prof. Dunbar of Hamburg thinks that he has been able to produce an efficient antitoxin from the blood serum of horses treated with pollen toxin. This remedy is now manufactured at Niltits upon a large scale and has been given the name of polianting Its manufacture is under the control of the veterinary university at Leipsic. A serum suitable for hypodermic injec tions in the object of the most recent ex periments. Prof. Dunbar thinks that this. while not absolutely necessary, would be advantageous, because hay fever differs from other diseases in which specific antitoxins have been employed in that the in-

period of several weeks. "A subcutaneous treatment would in such a case be desirable," says Prof. Dunbar, "If the patient thereby would be made perfectly insensible to the pollen texin for a longer duration than, say, of one to two weeks. This does not seem to be possible at periments for active immunization of the hay fever patients as being wholly unsuita mode of application had to be found possible for every patient at any time. It was therefore a pleasant surprise for me when could show that the simple application of one drop of the serum to the conjunctiva or into the nasal canal sufficed to render these main entrances of the poison completely insensible and also to remove irritation already existing. "In cases where the nasal canals are entirely closed the desired end will be attained by applying the pollantine repeatedly to the conjunctiva. It then acts from the lachrymal canal upon the mucous memrane of the nose. If in addition a small hall of cotton wetted or sprinkled with antitoxin is introduced into the nasal canal nost afflicted it can be made perfectly ree again in the course of about half an hour, and then the treatment can be appiled to the other side."

A further advantageous use of the rem edy was obtained by pulverizing it. In this form it was found to be proof against bacteriological decomposition. Patients require about fifty grains of the remedy in powdered form to keep themselves free from attacks during an entire season. Of 500 patients treated by Dr. Luchbert 26 used ollantine, with absolutely favorable results, 143 with partial success and 68 with none.

In addition the company agrees to give a life insurance policy to each subscriber for a fixed amount, and if the subscriber should die before the house is paid for, so much of it as is required to pay for the house will be deducted for that purpose, and the house will become the property of the widow or other beneficiaries, the balance of the life insurance also to be paid to them. The company has set aside the sum of $390,000 to curry out this project and M. W. Alexander has been chosen to supervise the execution of the plan.
