MAINTENANCE FOR SIGNAL CORPS HERE

Hero of Arctic Expedition Saved by Schley a Dramatic Figure in the Arena of Public Affairs.

Brigadier General Adolphus W. Greely, chief signal officer of the United States army, was in the city Friday on his return from Alaska, where he has been inspecting the installation of the various features of the signal service in that territory.

Omaha the Headquarters.

In response to an inquiry relative to the establishment of the Fort Omaha signal station, he said:

Greely to the Rescue.

General Greely is a more than national character and is a fine courtly gentleman. He still bears traces of his terrible experience in the Arctic regions from 1851 to 1854. He is but little past 60 years of age. He entered the army as a member of the Nineteenth Massachusetts volunteer infantry at the outbreak of the civil war. He was appointed second lieutenant in the Eighty-first United States colored infantry in 1862. First lieutenant in 1864, brevetted major in March, 1865, and promoted to a captaincy the same year. COUNCILMEN IN CONTEMPT

Back, Dyball, Evans, Huntington and Schroeder Subject to Court's Order.

JUDGE SUTTON AUTHORIZES ACTION

Court Declares Majority Members of City Council Entered into Conspiracy to Violate Judicial Instructions.

Judge Sutton Friday morning instructed County Attorney Sibaugh at once to file information against Councilmen Back, Dyball, Evans, Huntington and Schroeder for alleged contempt of court in violating the restraining order issued out of his court last Wednesday afternoon.

In reaching this decision and giving his instructions to the county attorney Judge Sutton spoke in severe terms of what he bluntly called "the conspiracy of these councilmen to violate the order of the court."

"It is common knowledge in Omaha that for a long time certain of the councilmen have been organized and prepared to treat with contempt any order that might be issued against them by the courts. They have publicly announced that intention, and at least one councilman was quoted by the newspapers as having made that declaration on the floor of the council. All of the equity judges of this county have thoroughly understood this."

"I am not, therefore, surprised at the action of the council in ignoring the restraining order issued in this matter, and I am of opinion that a speedy hearing and investigation of this complaint should be had."

Now is the Time to Act.

"I hope I am mistaken about some of these things I have mentioned, but I certainly shall not allow any other proceeding to interfere with this matter of contempt. Right now is the time to take up and settle the complaint against these councilmen. I do not want to be the least prejudiced party, but I feel I should not do anything to help them carry out their conspiracy against the order of the court."

The latter remark was made in giving a refusal to Attorney Connell's request that the issue as it might affect the mayor be decided at once, as Mayor Moore has only until next Tuesday to sign or return the gas ordinance to the council.

"I care nothing at all about the parties in issue. I certainly would not allow myself to be made a party to pulling any chestnuts out of the fire for the electric light company, and I have no personal interest in the gas company or in the official acts of the councilmen as such. But if these councilmen have done everything they could to violate the order of this court they are not to be excused by any other intervening proceeding."

"The important question right now, beyond all others, is: Did the court have jurisdiction to issue the restraining order and was the proper bond given? The court is clearly of the opinion, after some examination of the law, that it had jurisdiction of the subject matter."

Continuation for Mayor.

"A continuation until September 13 will be taken in the matter as it affects or

NO SURFACE WORK FOR HIM

Careful Observer Cannot Stand for Man Who Won't Think.

"A man after my own heart is one that probes into the hidden meaning of things," remarked the Careful Observer yesterday afternoon, as he and the Oldest Inhabitant moved away from a photograph that was desecrating the flag by playing "The Star Spangled Banner" with a broken record.

"Yes, indeed," continued the infinitely careful one, "a man that tries out his little life from day to day by merely accepting things at their face value, without dipping into the stream and bringing up the hidden mysteries and beauties, will not get much out of life, will not have his cognomen inscribed in the hall of fame nor will he see his name in the advertised letter list, or be asked to say a few words on public occasions. I have tried both ways and never got on in the money until I shouldered my little satchel and began turning up the soil and otherwise making my presence felt."

"You have again struck a paying lead," replied the Oldest Inhabitant, as he stopped at a window to view some horse show clothes and light his pipe. "Time searching for the real and hidden meaning of things the old traditions are one by one being relegated to the junk pile. Do you appreciate that one can never tell by the looks of a frog how far he is going to jump? You know things as they came, and deep and that the early bird rides on the first car and gets the best at the market. There is a why and a wherefore in all these things. Things don't just happen in this world."

The Careful Observer said all that.

"Inasmuch as we agree on every point there is no occasion for argument, so I move you that we close the incident and go down to the next corner and watch the policemen catch Pat Crows," concluded the Oldest Inhabitant.

The motion being seconded and carried, the Careful Observer and the Oldest Inhabitant went to the next corner, only to find that the crowd was viewing a man who had been shopping two hours with his wife and was yet happy.

Disappointed in not seeing the king of kidnapers the two besom citizens went to a bakery and bought some coffee cake.

All of the attorneys, Mr. Connell especially, said the sooner the hearing was called the better it would suit them. County

VOTERS HURRY TO REGISTER

Swarm into City Clerk's Office to Get on Books So They Can Vote.

"Things in the city clerk's office took on more the appearance of an ante-primary election Friday morning when non-registered voters swarmed in to make affidavits and secure the right to take part in the party primaries September 13. More than 100 removal certificates have been issued and applications have been made for fifteen affidavits. Only three of the latter have been issued owing to delays in securing freeholders to testify to the affiants' residence in a particular precinct.

The force of men and young woman typewriters who have been busy for more than ten days revising the registration lists and preparing them for the political parties and primary election officers to conform with the new ward and precinct boundaries, will be dismantled in a few days. The lists for the parties will be ready for delivery Saturday night. The lists for the election officers will be corrected up to date with the removal certificates and affidavits of registration issued.

Local Breivities.

Thieves entered the home of C. G. Leebig of Forty-eighth and Center streets and secured $50.00 and a gold watch.

The poultry department of A. F. Ahlstrom, 2718 Ames avenue, was raided Thursday evening, so it has been reported to the police.

Patrick Glaven was fined $1 and costs in police court Friday morning for being arrested by Officer Hudson on a charge of spitting on the sidewalk.

Herman Collin has bought a forty-four-foot lot adjoining his residence at 134 South Thirty-second avenue and on the rear of it Friday morning he had a swimming pool built and a hunting and fishing excursion and tickets will be good on all trains the following Monday.

William Murray was arraigned in police court Friday morning on a charge of vagrancy and was sentenced by the acting police judge to thirty days. Police officers found that Murray has been around Omaha for a long time and made his boast he does not have to work.

George W. Epps, arrested by Detectives Horne and Pattillo, was fined $5 and costs when arraigned in police court Friday morning on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The testimony against Epps was that he threatened to stab a porter at the Midland hotel and was about to buy a knife when arrested. Epps recently served a year for cutting a man.

Edward Morris, arrested a week ago at Lincoln and brought to Omaha by Sergeant Hendrickson to wear on a charge of embezzlement preferred by Edward Cackley, was discharged in police court Friday morning by acting Police Judge Foster. The judge found from the evidence in the case that Morris had no criminal intent in holding back collections belonging to Cackley.
