of the government selling the trust lands and paying the Indians a portion of the proceeds of the trust sale, and the money realized from the sale of the lands is the personal property of the Indians and is available for taxation just as any other funds realized from the sale of property of other citizens. The fact that the government trust sale was to run for twenty-five years has been eliminated. It is held by the attorneys for Thurston county, in the act of paying any portion of the funds over to the Indians before the term of trust sale has expired.

The entire morning was spent in arguing the demurrer of the defendants and upon the conclusion of the arguments at noon Judge Munger took the case under advisement and may not hand down his decision for several days.
