GOSSIP OF THE POLITICIANS

Office Seekers and Friends Beginning to Sit Up and Take Notice.

DEMOCRATS OBJECT TO MACHINES

Think Voting Devices Will Hurt Them—Number of Unopposed Candidates Keep Down Some Political Fever.

With the near approach of the primaries there is beginning to be some lively stepping down of aspirants. From the basement of the court house, where two voting machines are set up and under constant examination by a mob of curious men, little groups radiate out into the different corridors and onto the four sets of steps at the entrances. Here they sit in court and discuss candidates and the chances for their favorites at the primaries.

On the democratic side John Power appears to be chosen favorite of a majority of the talkers. One man said on this point: "The old man is a winner because he plays fair all around the line. Tom Flynn is a young man and a good fellow, but the party needs its strongest man at this time for every office. We expect to have our county wards and precincts, where no candidate has filed, but in order to get our very best men to run we must have a nucleus of strong leaders for the ticket. These we figure to give the people in John Power, John Drexel and Mr. Woodruff for county judge. At this time we cannot afford to take many chances, even for friendship's sake, and Tom Flynn has years enough coming to afford to wait."

"These machines are going to work against the democratic candidates in certain wards and precincts," said an observer after he had watched their manipulation by an expert in the office of Superintendent McCaffrey of the court house. "Why, a man with half a mind for figures can see that if the judges of election refuse to operate the machines as often as they were compelled to mark ballots in the other years they are not going to have time to do anything else. In the end the machines may prove a good thing, but at the jump off the democrats are certainly going to suffer."

One feature that detracts in large measure from making the pre-primary campaign a bit less exciting than it otherwise would be is that there are so many unopposed candidates. Naturally, the men who have no opposition for the nomination they seek are laying on their oars until after the primaries have been held. They want to reserve their ammunition until the lines of battle are made up, when they will fight up their campaign with a view to making the very best of their opportunities.

Among those exempt from a primary campaign are County Treasurer Fink, County Clerk Drexel, William Fleming and J. W. Woodruff, who are running for the democratic ticket, and Messrs. Solomon and Tracy, for county commissioner on the republican and democratic tickets, respectively, in the Third congressional district. On the justice of the peace ballot in Omaha there is but one democratic candidate, as against thirteen republicans, with only six to be elected.

What promises to be an interesting contest at the republican primaries is in the Fifth congressional district, where William G. Ure and Henry Ostrom are striving for the nomination. Until County Clerk Drexel accepted the advice of the county attorney and decided to place the names of these candidates on the official primary ballot the interest was shown in the contest by the court, as many voters were in doubt as to the matter coming before the primaries. Now that the preliminary contest has ended with victory for the presumptive candidates, the voters are beginning to "take notice."

One of the little matters that is causing the bile to rise in certain democratic breasts is the fact that William Fleming, who is unopposed for county treasurer on the democratic ticket, is not in the "white" democratic candidates' list in his literature. On the labor day program circulated at Courtland Beach, Mr. Fleming contented himself with saying that he was a candidate on his record, without any mention of party affiliation. The old Bourbon and his friends are shown in the stand for this. "He is either a democrat or he is not," they say. "Let him come out flat-footed if he wants our support. This Cleveland-Parker trick is no good and never will be."

At the meeting of the Real Estate exchange Wednesday the following resolution was adopted by unanimous vote: Whereas, one of our members, William Wallace, 2429 Harney street, at 8 o'clock this (Thursday) morning, September 14, 1905, aged 85 years and 11 days; Funeral from the residence at 2300 Oak Saturday afternoon, September 15, 1905. Sixth Ward Republican league held a meeting last night at which the league elected a committee of five to be in motion to keep people who are under police surveillance in line for the business partner of Police Commissioner Broatch.

Some of the policemen who have been plugging for John McDonald for several weeks have been instructed to be on guard from political activity and returned their uniforms to ally the feeling engendered by their pernicious activity in politics, and it is currently reported a new set of plain-clothes policemen has been set on foot for the purpose of being used as police surveillance in line for the business partner of Police Commissioner Broatch.

"If all the men and all the corporations that B. F. Thomas claims are behind his back as candidates for the county judgeship make good he ought to win out hands down," said a Sixth ward politician. "Mr. Thomas feels confident that he will have the support of all the Shriners, Knights Templar, Modern Woodmen and members of several other fraternities. He also counts on the firemen, for whom he pushed the twelve-hour shift bill through the senate. Then he confidently looks to the potential influence of Manager Kenyon of the stock yards and the managers of the
