SHORTAGE EVEN NINE HUNDRED DOLLARS

Defendant Admits Peculations Cover

Long Period, but Insists All Went Toward Secresary Family Expenses.

Jon J. Riley the defaulting assistant superintendent of the Omaha postoffice money order department, walved examination before United States Commissioner Anderson Tuesday afternoon and was bound over to the federal grand jury in $2,000. He expects to be able to secure bail within a few days. The principal witnesses in the case are Superintendent C. E. Burmelster of the money order department, Assistant Postmaster J. L. Woodard, Captain Patrick Mostyn of the police department and Postoffice Inspector Moore. Each of these witnesses gave their own recognizance in $100 each to appear before the grand jury in November to give their evidence in the

Nothing further has developed in the care The amount of Riley's shortage is even too Riley admitted Tuesday morning that his seculations had extended over a considcrable period and that the money had not all been taken at once. He said:

"I wish to deny the assertion that the money was lost in gambling. I never won or lost $5 by any gambling game in my whole life." Pressed as to what he had done with the money he said:

"It all went to the support of my family and for actual expenses." The court room was crowded Tuesday afternoon during Riley's arraignment and a very general sympathy is expressed for He has not yet secured an attorney. He still presents the same haggard appear

PARROT BITES MAN ON EAR Pretty Poll and Her Owner Demolish Stranger Who Visits Their Place.

A green parrot in the shoe shop of William McCrum, 1706 St. Mary's avenue, bit Gue Shlenk of Fremont on a finger and inflicted a painful wound after Shlenk persisted in abusing and threatening both Mr. McCrum and the bird, so the shoe man states.

According to report Shlenk raised quite a disturbance in the store, after which he was forcibl yejected by McCrum and and assistant. In the melee Shlenk received a blow in the head, was attended at the police station by the police surgeons and then booked as a suspictous character. McCrum will appear against Shlenk in police court Wednesday morning. McCrum's story is that Shlenk, who is a stranger, came into the shop to have a pair of shoes repaired. While waiting for the shoes to be fixed Shienk, so McCrum says, busied himself abusing the cobbler and the parrot, the latter being a privileged character around the shop, where the bird runs loose. After chafing under the abuse of Shlenk, the bird made a grab for Shlenk's finger. This so angered Shlenk that he threatened both McCrum and the poll parrot, Mr. McCrum maintains. Then the shoe man sailed in for Shlenk and Shlenk sailed in for McCrum with a knife, which McCrum says he took away from the stranger after a struggle. Shlenk finally was taken out of the shop and the police notified. Mr. Parr the combatants outside of the shop and it was with some difficulty that the bird was restrained from further taking up his master's cause.

In the mixup Sheink was struck over the head by one of McCrum's fists. The Fremont's man's injuries are not serious. The parrot will be subpoensed to appear in police court Wednesday morning.

WALSH'S FISH AND BEAR YARNS

from the Pacific coast, where he has been rusticating several weeks with his family. He took in the Portland exposition and then went into the mountains hunting grouse and pheasants and did the fishing story that he claims is original and has several affidavits of credible witnesses to prove its truthfulness. He says he caught seventeen salmon, all himself, the smallest weighing six pounds, and as evidence he brought them all home with him and he is treating all the commission men, their employes and traders, with a genuine salmon dinner at Peter Boisen's in the Board of Trade building. But Mr. Walsh's adventures did not stop here. He armed himself neighborhood, a double-barreled, old-fash-

"And," says Mr. Walsh, "just as I was in the midst of this sportsman's paradise I stumbled upon the trail of a bear. That bear must have been an old timer. His large as a small door mat) and I followed that track up the mountain side, up, up, up, and finally it turned off onto the dry, hard rocks and I could trace it no further. I felt I had done my duty, heaved a sigh of relief and quit. I brought all the game home except the hear."

AGE NO BULWARK OF PEACE Woman Ninety-Five Goes to Conri with Complaint Against Her

Supporting her bent form on a stick, Mrs. Hannah Riley McCarthy, 86 years of age, appeared in police court Tuesday morning as complaining witness against her aged and Mason streets. The case was heard Tuesday morning, but Police Judge Berka has reserved his decision until Court Sergeant Whelan shall have made an investigation of the case in the McCarthy neighborhood.

Mrs. McCarthy told the judge her husband had tried to choke her, had knocked violently on her door and had on a number through her keyhole. The old woman further explained that her husband had since building in the rear of the McCarthy yard, while she had remained at the old stand. Just what caused the rupture in the Mc-Carthy home last Yuletide season the wife would not divulge.
