TERMS OF ALLIANCE

Text of New Treaty Between Great Britain and Japan Given Out.

TO PRESERVE PEACE IN FAR EAST

Paramount Interests of Japan in Korea Specifically Recognized.

GUARANTEES OPEN DOOR IN CHINA

Integrity of the Empire and Rights of All Nations to Be Preserved.

WILL DEFEND EACH OTHER'S RIGHTS

In Case of Attack Upon Territory of Either Party, Both Will Make War and Agree to Peace in Common.

LONDON, Sept. 27.—The text of the new agreement between Great Britain and Japan, which was signed by Lord Lansdowne, the British foreign secretary, and Baron Hayashi, the Japanese minister to Great Britain, on August 13, was issued by the Foreign office late last evening. The agreement is a brief, but it contains a great deal of information, including eight articles and a preamble. Accompanying the agreement is a letter from Lord Lansdowne to the British ambassadors at St. Petersburg and Paris for transmission to the Russian and French governments respectively. The agreement is a guarantee of peace and prosperity in the far east, in which all countries may participate on equal terms.

ALLIANCE FOR DEFENSE. The main features of the new agreement have already been forecasted in the Associated Press dispatches from London and Paris. The treaty, however, brings out more fully the terms of the agreement, which practically makes Great Britain and Japan Great Britain for the purposes of defense "in the regions of east Asia and India." This includes India specifically as a point at which any aggression by any power will call for the assistance of Japan. The morning papers in long laudatory articles welcoming the new and more extensive alliance of the two insular kingdoms west and east of the Indian ocean, which is the dangerous thunder cloud which for so many years has hung over the Indian frontier.

SURE GUARANTEE OF PEACE. Baron Hayashi, who was interviewed by the Associated Press after the publication of the agreement, said: "The treaty is not a guarantee of peace, but it is a guarantee of peace in the far east, and that it is a guarantee of peace in the far east is a guarantee of peace in the far east." He said that the treaty is a guarantee of peace in the far east, and that it is a guarantee of peace in the far east.

MEETS NEW CONDITIONS. Sir Charles Dilke, in speaking to the Associated Press, took the position that the existing status quo, but said it was an inevitable consequence of the new conditions in the far east and that it was certainly a stronger guarantee of the maintenance of peace than the previous alliance. He argued that Russia was not really a menace to the Far East, but that it was the susceptibility of Great Britain with regard to the attitude of Persia Sir Charles did not believe Russia would risk a quarrel with India.

WHILE there is some criticism of the treaty in the radical newspapers, it is only half-hearted, and London, anxiously awaiting the breaking of official silence as to the document, heaves a sigh of relief and greets the positive assurance of the future assistance of the powerful ally in all matters pertaining to the safety of the empire.

THE PREAMBLE. The preamble reads: "The governments of Great Britain and Japan, being desirous of replacing the agreement concluded at London, August 13, 1902, by fresh stipulations, have agreed upon the following articles, which have for their object: A.—Consolidation and the maintenance of general peace in the regions of east Asia and India. B.—The preservation of the common interests of all nations in the Far East, and the independence and integrity of the Chinese empire and the principle of equal opportunities for all nations in China. C.—The maintenance of the territorial rights of all nations in China. D.—The maintenance of the territorial rights of all nations in the Far East, and the independence and integrity of the Chinese empire and the principle of equal opportunities for all nations in China.

OTHERS ARE BARRED. Article 4.—The high contracting parties agree that neither will without consulting the other enter into a separate arrangement with another power to the prejudice of the objects described in the preamble. Article 5.—The high contracting parties agree that neither will without consulting the other enter into a separate arrangement with another power to the prejudice of the objects described in the preamble.

MORTON WILL REPORT TODAY

President of Equitable Will Tell Board of Directors That Assets of Society Are Intact.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—A statement was given out from the office of President Paul Morton of the Equitable Life Assurance society today to the effect that at a meeting of the directors of the society, to be held tomorrow, Mr. Morton will report that the Equitable society has paid out from January 1 until August 31, 1905, in death claims, annuities, endowments, purchased policies and other benefits the sum of $24,000,000. The statement says: "This is an average of more than $125,000 per other day, and it will be fully two weeks more before it is concluded. Enough is already known to enable him to say that the securities and real estate of the society are all intact and that their values approximate those exhibited by the official reports. Any question of the value of stocks of real estate will be toward conservatism. The expert accountants are far enough along with their work for Mr. Morton to assure the directors that any future disclosure of misappropriation of funds will probably refer to amounts which the society might have received, but which never came into its treasury, with which its books do not deal, and which have never been shown or claimed to be assets. That there are cases of this kind he has substantial proof, but what the amounts are, which the society cannot say at the present time, although he believes that his charted accounts will soon ascertain everything."

PACIFIC MILLERS EXCITED

Fear Lower Railroad Rates from Missouri River Will Hurt Their Trade.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26.—A clash between the milling interests of the east and the Pacific coast is imminent. The cause is the decision that the Interstate Commerce commission is reported to have reached regarding the differential on the overland railroads from the Missouri river to all Pacific coast points on corn and meal.

This reduction, if it shall be put in force, will enable the eastern millers to have a great advantage over those of the Pacific coast and as a result of this consideration eastern millers are stirring about in this city and elsewhere to try to have a rehearing of the facts in the hope of securing a new decision.
