KELLY WELCH BOES THE PITCHING Oldest Inhabitant, Careful Observer

and Little Boy on Center Field Fence Weep to See Fing No More.

That little game of base ball yesterday afternoon-probably the last that will be played this season at the Vinton Street park-was not unlike a trip downtown in a crowded street car, so full was the game little incidents. Of course, there was no street car on the grounds, the woman who jumps off backwards and calls the conductor names was not there, there was no dog cold in death before a car of passengers' eyes, no plugged nickels were returned, although Manager Rourke did let one little boy in for 24 cents; no woman with four small children and a basket of groceries was carried four blocks beyond her destination and her husband at home waiting for his supper after a hard, hard day's work; there was no young man who rode all the way to Bouth Omaha on the last car, thinking he was being tranported to Walnut Hill.

There was none of those things, except possibly, in the imagination of one who likened the game to a ride downtown on a crowded street car. But the game was so fraught with fads, fancies, foibles and frivolities that it made the little boy who sits on the center field fence go and tell Pa Rourke after the game what was in his mind, namely, that the game was like a street car ride. You know, Pa, that you read in the street cars, on the signs that are fastened over the seats, about 'a voice from the grave,' 'the man that ran and fell,' 'the boy that rocked the boat and hid his elster's curling iron,' 'the smile that stays on,' 'the best place in Omaha to get a bird and a bottle at just the right temperatures' and all these things."

Pa Pats the Pretty Pate. Pa gave the boy a kindly pat on the head, told him to simmer down for this season and return next spring. It was not such a bad game after all. Kelley Welch held the Lee-Glass-Andreesen Originals down without a hit, even if the amateurs did make one run. The Original boys played well, but Mr. Welch teased them all along the trail. Fifteen hits and eleven runs for the Omaha team did the work for Rourke's children, who wept whenever they looked toward that old flag

Johnny Gonding umpired the game and was well received by the fans. In the third act he responded to two encores. In the fourth inning Gonding called "three strikes" so loudly that a sleeping man on the top tier of the grandstand was suddenly awakened. He rolled down two tiers terand then pulled out a long coupon railroad | lyt ticket from one of his pockets.

There was, however, one sad, sad thought that filled the hearts of the fans with Du-large gobs of gloom during the game. That De-gadoss was not because De Bourks forgot Bec sadness was not because Pa Rourke forgot to wear his cuffs, nor was it because Kelly Weich was hit by a pitched ball from Adams, but because the pennant that floated so triumphantly to the Vinton street breezes all season was not to be seen yesterday afternoon. In the words of the poet-butcher, "There was an aching void at the top of the pole in the field," and everyone seemed to notice the void. Over in Pa Rourke's box, with heads bowed low, were the Oldest Inhabitant and the Careful Observer, while with his little sister. The same was a benefit for the Rourke men and was fairly well patronized.

FOOT BALL OUTLOOK IN IOWA

State University Team Greatly Weakened by Absence of Three Players. ened by Absence of Three Players.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Oct. 1.—(Special Telegram).—Heavy scores piled up against Monmouth by the State university, Saturday, has not been cause for particular enthusiasm on the part of the Hawkeyes. With Chicago game only six days distance, continued absence of Chalmers, White and Tupper from the game is causing alarm. White has water on his knee and Chalmers' sprained tendon is improving but slowly. Coach Chalmers is having a hard time to find subon his knee and Chalmers' sprained tended is improving but slowly. Coach Chalmers is having a hard time to find substitutes for both men though Sidie's game in right tackie position against Monmouth was entirely satisfactory. Rapid improvement in formation and speed is expected of the team during next week and if lowa is able to send its full strength against the Maroons the contest should be a good one. Last week has shown that there will be but three teams in the contest for championship of the state. Heston's squad from Drake university over at Des Moines, Coach Ristines Agriculturalists and representatives of the State university are the contending factors. Grinnell college and the State Normal school at Cedar Falls, which in years past have put out teams that have been deciding factors in the race for state honors are reported to be weak this year and their work thus far against minor colleges and high schools seems to substitute the rumor. Great interest is being taken in the team that Heston is developing in Des Moines as it is believed he will altempt to introduce the tactics of Youst into Iowa foot ball as far as possible. Freshman residence rule which was adopted by both Ames and Drake has crippled Heston's squad but state sporting circles expect him to turn out a very fast 'varsity aggregation.
