men: Roy Young, W. E. Rice, C. M. Bachmann and R. Ridsay. Ancient Order of United Workmen. In general design this float suggested the form of a Greek galley. A pretty anchor design with the order's shield loomed up brilliantly in the lights.

The Elks. The spirit of good cheer and fellowship was carried out in a striking manner in the Elks' float, which was a fine piece of work. An heroic representation of an elk occupied the front of the float, a clock with the hands pointing to the emblematic hour of 11 p. m. rested against an imposing background. Beneath the clock were the typical words "Cervus Alocos," indicating "deer elk," and of particular significance to members of the Elks. The cheering old tune of Auld Lang Syne was played on chimes on the float. John Lund, H. O. Benford, C. W. Goodall, H. Marshall, W. T. Sams, O. D. Harris, H. Becker and T. W. Turner occupied positions on the float. Riding horses were William Eiboury, E. F. Bralley, J. Lund and H. O. Benford.

Woodmen of the World. "Peace on Earth and Good Will to All Men" was the message conveyed by the Woodmen of the World float. The white-winged dove of peace appeared with an olive branch under its wing. A miniature world was shown as indicative of the scope of the order, while a large stump and an axe and mallet further carried out the suggestion that the float represented the Woodmen of the World. William Yates, F. H. Shatwell, C. S. Sawell and L. Henderson represented characters on the float, while H. Fitchett, Jr., S. H. Timme, Frank Yates and D. Troup were the horsemen for this float.

The Eagles. A patriotic air pervaded the Eagle float from the time it left the den until the return trip was made. The chief figure on this float was a large eagle in the attitude of flying. The emblem of the Fraternal Order of Eagles was prominently shown in various places. The foliage and lights helped to make this float one of the richest designs in the parade. The letters "L. T. J. E.," representing love, truth, justice and equality, were in evidence on the float. On the float were R. H. Manley, Charles Armstrong, J. R. Wells and E. H. McClure. Horse-

Stranger Than Fiction. A Remedy Which Has Revolutionized the Treatment of Stomach Trouble. The remedy is not heralded as a wonderful discovery, nor yet a secret patent medicine, neither is it claimed to cure anything except dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach troubles with which nine out of ten suffer.

Noticed It. A Young Lady from New Jersey Had Her Wits to Work. "Coffee gave me terrible spells of indigestion which, coming on every week or so, made my life wretched until some one told me that the coffee I drank was to blame. That seemed nonsense, but I noticed these attacks came on shortly after eating and were accompanied by such excruciating pains in the pit of the stomach that I could only find relief by loosening my clothing and lying down. If circumstances made it impossible for me to lie down I spent hours in great misery."

German and Bohemian Turners. Signs and symbols were presented in profusion in the float representing the German and Bohemian turners of the city. The upholders of the order, with much dexterity, so that an artistic piece of work was offered. At the front of the float was a figure of John, the founder of the turner societies. Bohemian and German inscriptions were notified all over the float.

Knights of Pythias. The story of Damon and Pythias was suggested in a brilliant setting seen on the Knights of Pythias float. The picture represented showed Damon offering himself to the hands of Dionysius as a substitute for Pythias. Damon appeared in the front of the float between two pillars at the front of the float appeared the emblem of the order with the letters, "F. B. C." A forest was shown at the end of the float. Two bunches of twigs, tied together and denoting strength, were shown. The color scheme of this float was splendid. The characters in the float were represented by R. C. Streulow, Dr. C. B. St. F. Hize, O. A. Heath, H. M. Johnson, Ernest James, F. C. Reimer and Otto Wagner. On horses were: J. A. Dalsell, Mike Lee, William Berg and Rudolph Beck.

The Royal Achates. The massing of several large designs emblematic of the Royal Achates comprised the ninth float. These figures were very brilliant and taken together made a pretty float. A Maltese cross shed its radiance over the float, while a number of little figures completed the moving picture presented. Irving G. Barlight, E. L. Potter, C. C. Clark and W. W. Weasor rode on the float, while H. Pritchett, Dr. W. N. Dorward, E. O. Bothwell and R. F. Gamon were the mounted knights.

Modern Women of America. Float No. 10 had a refreshing atmosphere in that it presented scenes close to nature. A little slump of cedars with a woodman holding his axe, an eagle perched on a log and about to soar away, oak leaves and acorns were presented on this float in a pleasing manner. High up in the front of the float a woman sat holding a torch that all might see the way. The emblem of the Modern Women of America were worked together to good effect. C. H. T. Rippen, K. C. Bishop, William Urbach, W. H. Dorrance, A. Karbach and S. L. Bonorris were assigned to this float. C. L. Richards, H. E. Stafford, W. E. Davis and H. J. Rippen were the knights in armor who rode horses with this float.

Knights of Columbus. The theme presented in the float representing the Knights of Columbus was one that appealed to all in a forcible manner. The front figure of this float was a representation of the Santa Maria, the flag ship of Columbus when he made his little trip to this country many years ago. The ship rested on two mermaid figures holding the heads and shoulders of Venus and Adonis. A bust of Columbus, several Spanish knights and other suggestions of the story of Columbus were shown. The float was one of the most pretentious of the twenty in the parade. F. E. Donahue, Dan Hurley, C. B. Dugdale and S. J. Donkey were on the float, while P. J. McNamara, N. H. Nelson, A. J. Petrie and W. H. Jones were the horsemen in armor.

Knights of the Maccabees. Bee hives, bees, flowers and a huge sunflower were chief objects that made the Maccabees' float something to please the center of fairly land. Leading the way, at the top of the front of the float, was the figure of a woman holding by rein six bees, giving the suggestion that the bees were drawing the float through the air. On the float were A. Karbach, Ernest Lehmann, C. A. Damon, Charles Karbach, Ed Palmer and R. M. Sutton. The horsemen riding with this float were C. B. White, W. J. Cattin, H. Petrie and C. L. Porter.

Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Something of a novelty was presented in the "all-seeing-eye," shown in the Odd Fellows' float. The eye was of large dimensions and took within its range of vision every eye along the route of the parade. The eye was in the center of a triangle with the three words, "Friendship, Love and Truth" flanked. Various figures emblematic of the order were worked out. At the front of the float was shown the uplifted hand with a heart in the palm. A Reichenbach, W. L. Marjita, C. A. and A. Peters, R. Howard and F. W.

Dozy were on the float. The men on horses were Fred Busch, K. W. Bartos, S. McLaugh and George Perrine.

The Danish Brotherhood. The Danish float harked back to the days when the Danish kings rode the raging main in vessels after which part of this float was designed. Danish Brotherhood members were generously distributed on the float. Personages of the local members represented on the float by local members of the Danish Brotherhood. This float made a pretty appearance. The ornate decorations were lavish and the subject matter arranged well. On the float were S. A. Corneer, Fred Brodgers, J. Jensen, J. Jacobson, J. Michaelson, A. Anderson and A. Thompson. The horsemen were J. Mortenson, W. Thompson, Chris Nelson and A. Granaack.

Red Men. The Red Men float was a typical western one. At one end of the float was a large Indian's head beaded with the fringe of two buffalo. On the other end of the float, a western scene, with a clump of trees, tepees, the squaw cooking her meal over the fire, a group of Indians having a powwow. The scene presented on this float made quite a hit with the crowd. Those riding on this float and representing the characters were Julius Althouse, F. T. Sams, John Dennis, W. O. Welsh and C. T.

Police Make Only Three Arrests During the Evening. "I'm afraid we'll get hurt," said a timid girl on Sixteenth as the clock was ticking along toward the court house.

Stranger's Body Found. ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5.—The headless body of an unidentified boy apparently about 19 years of age was found on the tracks of the railroad track at Lesperance street, Sunday. The head lay three feet away. The trade mark of a firm in Erie, Pa., marked the hat. In the clothing was found $1.00 and an old pistol. It is presumed he fell between the cars. There were no scratches on the body and the face was not scratched to any extent.

Thousands More People Than One Year Ago. AK-SAR-BEN Program. Gates open from 9 a. m. until midnight. Grand concert, 1 and 7 p. m. Attraction of aerial artist, 2 and 8 p. m. Phil D. Greene, aerial tower, 3 and 10 p. m. Princes Youtkevich, high wire act, 2 and 8 p. m. Slide for life, 5:15 and 9:55 p. m. Douglas County Agricultural Society exhibition. Nebraska moving picture show, 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. AK-SAR-BEN ball tonight at den. Attendance at King's Highway.

"On with the fun; let joy be unconfined," sang six high school girls as they tripped to the King's Highway last night after watching the grand pageant of King Ak-Sar-Ben as he passed with his courtiers. Their song was the unsaid thought of thousands of others, some of them from the utmost confines of the kingdom of Quivers, who came to behold the glory of their ruler. Like the girls, when the King passed, they hurried to the highway prepared by his majesty especially for their amusement.

Throughout the hours when the sun was shaping his western course, the keepers of the big shows on the Highway were pleased, for people were plenty, and into various parts of the show which were the means by which the distance narrowed and life in ease. The ping pong girls danced their sauciest dances, the lions growled their fiercest growls, Roberta posed in lights and the topsy-turvy toilet turned topsy-turvy all the afternoon.

The Order of Scottish Clans. The float representing the Order of Scottish Clans was resplendent with light and color and thoroughly representative of the hardy race of Scots. In a blaze of light was shown the St. Andrew's cross, the national letter "B" was shown in a heart, the chariot of the hero, the hero king of Scotland, the Scottish coat of arms, a group of turners were around the figure of John, paying tribute to his memory. On this float were Phil Miller, Joe Kasper, M. Krage, Fred Wallway, F. B. Suda and Emil Cernik. The horsemen were Fred Waller, G. Ewald, E. O. Dworack and V. Kunkel.

Independent Order of Foresters. This order was represented by a float of the central figure of which was the head of a moose, surrounded by American and Canadian flags, and a group of hunters of the north, bow and arrow. The letters "L. O. F." and "L. B. C." were inscribed over and below the head of the moose. Those who rode on this float were T. L. Combs, C. H. Trimble, C. B. Helmer and O. H. Fink. The knights on horses riding beside the float were the knights of John, Orman, D. Gillespie and C. A. Hawley.

Red Men. The Red Men float was a typical western one. At one end of the float was a large Indian's head beaded with the fringe of two buffalo. On the other end of the float, a western scene, with a clump of trees, tepees, the squaw cooking her meal over the fire, a group of Indians having a powwow. The scene presented on this float made quite a hit with the crowd. Those riding on this float and representing the characters were Julius Althouse, F. T. Sams, John Dennis, W. O. Welsh and C. T.

Police Make Only Three Arrests During the Evening. "I'm afraid we'll get hurt," said a timid girl on Sixteenth as the clock was ticking along toward the court house.

Stranger's Body Found. ST. LOUIS, Oct. 5.—The headless body of an unidentified boy apparently about 19 years of age was found on the tracks of the railroad track at Lesperance street, Sunday. The head lay three feet away. The trade mark of a firm in Erie, Pa., marked the hat. In the clothing was found $1.00 and an old pistol. It is presumed he fell between the cars. There were no scratches on the body and the face was not scratched to any extent.
