Old Superstition About Friday and Thirteen Being Fated Not Dead Yet.

Superintendent Noyes of the municipal asphalt plant stood just outside the entrance gate to the horse show arena Friday night.

"You are not going into the ring with that on your back, are you?" asked the paying man.

"But, man," remonstrated Noyes, "it's the 13th day of the month and a Friday. If I were you I would rub my hands over the head of this 'nigger' quick. I wouldn't give a nickel for your chances if you don't."

The rider was alarmed. He had just time to run his fingers through a kinky pate before he dashed out in the arena.

It is a rather strange circumstance, as the police books will show that on Friday, October 13, C. A. Skinner of 1213 Douglas street, lost thirteen ivory pool balls, which were stolen, it is said. Some of the police force are beginning to believe there is something in the old superstition about the number "13" and the day, Friday, having unlucky associations, although Captain Dunn refuses to stand for what he calls such nonsense. He says Friday is his best day.

"It is true an effort was made to get the business men interested in hopes they might contribute the $5,000 or so requisite to maintain the force for the remainder of the year. With the exception of Count Creighton and one or two others who offered to put in $500 apiece, there has been no response. Apparently nearly all the really influential and solid commercial factors of the city are holding aloof and exhibiting no interest in the matter of policing the town.
